Zach Wheat, the fleet-footed outfielder of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who is developing into one of the best base-runners in the National League. Wheat is a consistent hitter and a wonderfully fast fielder, covering a prodigious amount of ground. Manager Bill Dahlen has been investing considerable time every day drilling into the outfielder's dome the theories and practice of base-running, and Wheat is rapidly learning how to use his speed. He is one of the few real stars of the team.

CAROLINA SCHEDULE.

Tar Heels Will Play Lighter Teams Than in Previous Years in Order to Be in Better Shape to Trim Virginia Thanksgiving Day.

Virginia, for the latter college has triumphed so many times successively over the Tar Heels—no less than three—that it is becoming monotonous to loyal supporters of the white and blue. The most important omission on the schedule is the annual game with Georgetown, the Catholics and Tar Heels each having met with varied success in their previous contests.

A generous amount of new blood will be fused into the Carolina eleven for the coming season, so that a much lighter team than last year will be the result; consequently, the university men will have a better chance to adapt themselves to the new rules, which were Carolina's bugbears last fall.

Following is the schedule:
October 7—Wake Forest at Chapel Hill.
October 14—Bingham School (Asheville) at Chapel Hill.
October 20—Davidson at Charlotte.
October 25—U. S. Ship Franklin at Durham or Chapel Hill.
November 4—V. P. I. at Richmond.
November 11—University of South Carolina at Chapel Hill.
November 18—Washington and Lee at Norfolk.
November 30—(Thanksgiving) University of Virginia at Richmond.
