GIANTS WILL MAKE LAST STAND FOR HONOR TODAY

New York, Oct. 13.—In preparation for their last chance to prevent world series honors from slipping once and for all out of their hands into the clutches of the triumphant Red Sox, the New York Giants made the most of their opportunity to rest today.

While the National League champions recognize fully the disadvantage of the position they occupy with the series standing 3 to 1 in favor of their Boston rivals who need only one game more to clinch the championship, not a man of the Giants would admit tonight that he lost hope. John J. McGraw, manager of the team, counts on his men to show in this crisis the fighting form they displayed several times during the league season when their rivals for pennant honors had them forced into a corner.

"Once more the team is forced down to the last stand," said McGraw, "and I am certain the men will put up a fight that will make their friends proud of them."

The intense interest with which the series has been followed all through its sensational course, has abated somewhat among the Giant followers, with the dashing on Saturday of their hopes that their favorites would win the game in Boston and thus even up the series. Despite this and in favor of the somewhat general conviction that the Bostonians had "got the jump" and were in a fair way to win out, indications tonight were that another capacity crowd would be on hand at the Polo Grounds tomorrow.

The Red Sox did not arrive from Boston tonight until late and neither Jake Stahl nor Manager McGraw was communicative regarding the selection of boxmen for the crucial battle. Marquard, however, looked to be the logical selection of the New Yorks.

PROBABILITIES POINTED TO STAHL'S PITCHING COLLINS, HIS LEFT-HANDED STAR, WHO MADE SUCH AN EXCELLENT SHOWING IN THE TIE GAME OF LAST WEDNESDAY.

At the Grand Central station a big crowd of New York people was on hand when the visitors arrived. With the band playing the Boston fans sang "Tessie" the song which they claim has "laxed the Giants" in all but one of the contents thus far played. Players and followers went to the Elks Club where they lunched and were given an informal reception.

NATIONALS WIN HARD FOUGHT GAME FROM WHITE SOX

Chicago, Oct. 13.—The Chicago Nationals defeated the locals of the American League 4 to 2 today in the series which is to decide the city championship. This is the second victory for the Nationals. Two games resulted in ties.

A record crowd was in attendance. The total receipts was $21,197. Of this the National Commission will receive $2,119.70; each club gets $2,815.45 and $11,446.93 goes to the players' pool.

The crowd became so unmanageable in the early part of the game that it was impossible for a large detail of police to keep them from crowding to the field.

The National League players, each armed with a bat, went to the rescue.

GOOD FOOTBALL ELEVEN.

Mount Pleasant Has Several Games in Prospect and Would Like a Few More.

Mount Pleasant, Oct. 13.—The students of Mount Pleasant Collegiate Institute and inhabitants of the town are congratulating themselves on the splendid way in which the football team is rounding into form. With a Western coach and a large number of new formations and plays, the cadets were on the long end of a 98 to 0 score Saturday.

The real test of the team's ability will come when they meet the Davidson eleven on their own field October 19. The schedule includes a game with Baird School of Charlotte and a trip on which the cadets will take on Asheville soon. Bingham Military Academy and Catawba College. The institute still has a few open dates and would be glad to hear from any school in their class that would like to arrange for a game.

FORMERLY FROM WILSON.

Steve Yerkes of the Boston Red Sox Played in Eastern Carolina League.

Fayetteville, Oct. 13.—Steve Yerkes of the Boston Red Sox is the second former Eastern Carolina League star to win world-wide fame within the past three months, the other man being James Thorpe, who played in the old Eastern Carolina organization with Rocky Mount and Fayetteville and who reached the pinnacle of athletic fame in the great Olympic games.

Yerkes was purchased from Wilson, by Boston in 1909 mainly on account of his team work, and in the series being played between New York and Boston has shone himself a star of the first magnitude.

In Friday's game he was reported as starring on the defensive in addition to his fielding feats. His quick throw to the plate cut down a tying run and killed a Giant rally that held untold possibilities.

Denver Wins Championship.

Denver, Colo., Oct. 13.—The Denver Western League Club won the minor league championship by defeating Minneapolis, the American Association winners, today, in the fifth and final game of the series, 4 to 3. Today's victory gave the Denver Club four out of the five games played.

Pittsburg's Protest Upheld.

New York, Oct. 13.—Pittsburg's protest against Chicago's victory in the game of October 2 was upheld by President Lynch of the National League in a decision made public tonight and the game was thrown out of the record, thus changing slightly the league's standing. The protest was based on the fact that Catcher Cotter of Chicago was batting out of his turn when he hit a single, which won the game in the tenth inning.

President Lynch gave out tonight the official standing of the league as follows:

Clubs	Won	Lost
New York	103	48
Pittsburg	93	58
Chicago	91	59
Cincinnati	75	78
Philadelphia	73	79
St. Louis	63	90

AMUSEMENTS

"The Winning Widow."

Max Spiegel's musical comedy production, "The Winning Widow," which comes to the Academy of Music this afternoon and tonight is said to be a most pretentious one and is described as "the musical hit" of the year, and is considered to be one of the best singing organizations on the road. Some of the genuine whistleable song hits are: "What Would We Do Without the Moon," "I Love You," "There's Something Awfully Cute About a Soldier," "Why Don't You Come in for a Splash," "The Light That Lies in Woman's Eyes," etc. The company is a large one, headed by Marie Green, Mul Clarke and Ben Turbett and a strong cast of musical comedy favorites, and a chorus that is noted as being the prettiest, sprightliest and most graceful singing and dancing combination on the stage. The book of "The Winning Widow" is by Frank Kennedy, with musical lyrics by Seymour Furth and Will Heelan and is a pure and wholesome entertainment consisting of all that is good, new and refreshing in musical comedy. The dialogue is bright and crisp and the situations are legitimately funny without being risque. The music is tuneful and costumes handsome and attractive but without modest.

"The Traveling Salesman."

The second act scene of "The Traveling Salesman" represents the sampling room in a hotel, and as Bob Blake is supposed to be a cloak and suit drummer, the managers of the company, in view of the fact that the ladies are always interested in the latest styles of gowns, have taken advantage of the opportunity to display the latest creations of the dressmaker's art for the delectation of the feminine contingent of theater-goers.

Postoffice on Wheels.

Among the many points of interest on the show grounds of Ringling Brothers' circus is a fully equipped postoffice. It was not established by the government, yet it is larger than many that are run by Uncle Sam. There probably is no other in America visited daily by such a crowd of cosmopolitans.

Jules Turnour is the postmaster of Ringlingville. He is well fitted for the job, as he speaks French, German, Spanish, Hindoostani and Polish, and knows enough Chinese, Japanese, Portuguese and modern Greek to make himself understood in those tongues. Fifteen minutes after the last section of the circus train reaches town, Jules may be found at the town post-

Judge and Jury.

(From The Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

A Boston lawyer, Charles A. DeCourcy, makes a common sense suggestion for the betterment of American criminal trials. In addressing the American Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology at Milwaukee, Mr. DeCourcy has voiced the opinion that the average judicial instruction to a jury serves the purpose of obscuring the issues and confusing the jurors. He recommends that judges temporarily forget legal phraseology and let their words talk to the jury in the language which they can understand without the aid of an interpreter. He assumes as the charge to the jury is intended as an interpretation and not as an obstruction, there can be no objection to the stand taken by Mr. DeCourcy.

The average American jury is composed of men certainly not above average intelligence. That most of them desire to "well and truly" try their cases and render just verdicts cannot be doubted. The efforts of both prosecution and defense are frequently directed toward establishing a state of mental confusion. The judge in his final charge should endeavor to clear this away. He should remember that his audience is not an audience of lawyers or of learned men. Simple and direct charges might conceivably lessen the number of disagreements, and might be just verdicts in place of the miscarriages of justice that are so common in American criminal courts.

PLAYING GOOD BALL FOR THE GIANTS.

Left to right, Larry Doyle, catcher and second baseman, and Fred Merkle, the Giant's first baseman, snapped while warming up in front of the visitor's bench just before the start of the third game of the world's series (the second completed game). Both Doyle and Merkle are playing good ball for Manager McGraw, and are two of the strongest points in his defense.
