NO DISCRETION USED AUTOMOBILIST DECLARES

To the Editor of The Chronicle:
As viewed from the standpoint of a business man, the owners of automobiles are at the present time being subjected to many hardships as a result of the rigid application of certain laws, some of which are foolish and others good, but applied without discretion and judgment.

Reckless driving is unwarranted and should be prohibited under the penalty of heavy fines for the protection of the motorist as well as the public at large, but reckless driving is not necessarily confined to a speed greater than eight miles an hour. The driver of an automobile can display a far greater degree of recklessness going at this speed on a street crowded with people, than by driving 30 miles per hour on an other street free from traffic and the same distance from our center of population. What we need and should have is a law against reckless driving, regardless of the speed, and not a law defining the speed an automobile can be driven, regardless of surrounding conditions.

There is no doubt but that the automobilists of Charlotte are among our best citizens and as a rule are men who are recognized as law-abiding citizens, all of whom feel it an honor to have a part in the enforcement of our laws, but under the present law, it is practically impossible to start an automobile and change to high gear if you should happen to be within half a block of the square and headed in that direction without breaking the law. Perhaps someone will say, don't change to high gear until after you have passed the square. The answer to this is that if you do not in all probability you will be arrested for permitting smoke to emit from the exhaust pipe of your engine, a condition that usually follows running in low gear, particularly if you have put sufficient oil in your car to properly lubricate the machinery. It is proper and right to have a law prohibiting the fellow who thinks of no one but himself from racing his engine while his car is standing and thereby filling the air with offensive odors, but in the name of justice, let us have erased from our books a law that is so absurd as to make it possible for a big policeman carrying a big stick to almost snatch from his seat a man who already trembling with fear, thinking that he may be arrested for exceeding the speed limit, was running his car in low gear across the square and because it was new and had an over-supply of oil in the engine, it discharged a small volume of smoke from the exhaust pipe. A foolish application of a good law, you say, but is this the only instance? Just a few nights ago, one of our best citizens decided to take a ride in his motor car and desiring to be classed with those who love the laws of his country as well as for his own protection, he lighted his lamps and started for the fatal square, but unfortunately for him, a cruel gust of wind blew out his lamp on the rear of his car, thus enabling the man of prey to claim his victim and the city a fine of $10. Another instance is that of a well known real estate man, who on returning to the city from a trip in the country, discovered that he had lost his rear number plate, and while on his way to the store to buy another, was arrested and fined $10, for having lost his number.

There are other cases which could be given, but these are sufficient to demonstrate the foolish application of good laws. As all laws are supposed to be founded on reason, it would appear that in each case given, a suggestion from the officer to the offending party that he was not living up to the law, would have satisfied his ambition to enforce the law. In not a single instance would either of these people willingly violate the law, but for reasons unavoidable and beyond their control they did break the letter of the law and were all required to appear before the recorder.

The sensible application of the law pertaining to the lighting of lamps and the displaying of numbers, would result in the punishment of the willful offender. The law is for the lawless.

GAS, SORENESS AND INDIGESTION VANISH

Just as Soon as "Pape's Diapepsin" Comes in Contact With the Stomach All Distress is Gone.

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A FINE AGRICULTURAL EXHIBIT AT THE FAIR

Arrangements have been made by Mr. Edgar B. Moore, secretary, with Mrs. F. B. Puckett of the State Department of Agriculture, to have at the Charlotte fair a State test farm exhibit car. The assistant director of the State test farm exhibit, where it will be available for inspection at the fair. The exhibit for this year is placed in a passenger coach, which will occupy a portion of the siding on the inside of the fair grounds and will remain open free to all visitors. The exhibit completely fills a coach 40 feet long.

Included in the exhibit will be the leading varieties of corn on the stalk, showing the height of stalk, height of ears, size and shape of ears, and cross section showing shape of grain and size of cob; also museum jars, graphically representing the difference between the yields of the different varieties. Representative types of each kind of corn have been carefully selected to show each variety, not at its best nor poorest, but as it grows under average conditions. The different varieties of wheat, oats and cotton are shown in a similar way. Fertilizer experiments have been carried on with these crops, the results of which will be shown graphically in museum jars.

What Is Youth?

(From The Cleveland Plain Dealer.)
When does a woman cease to be young and when does a man begin to be old? It is a question not likely to be passed over, and when the dictum of some dignified body is seen upon it one should give it due attention. In Morocco a few weeks ago the new Sultan decreed that men under 30 might not appear in his councils, but that men over 30 might not serve in his bodyguard. This appears to establish a sort of deadline for the male sex.

This is a slap in the face. When a woman passes her twenty-fifth birthday what is she? An "old woman"? Or is she "middle-aged"? Oh, never! The latter term would be repudiated by any girl owning to less than twice that tale of years and rightly, too. What, then, shall she place herself—this feminine human being who is just growing into the full strength of her womanhood, but who is no longer, officially, a young woman?

Proof Positive.
(October, Lippincott's)
"Am I the first girl you ever kissed?"
"Supposing I said 'yes'?"
"Never mind supposing. Am I?"
"Supposing I said 'no'?"
"There! I knew I wasn't."
