

THE VICTORS WHO WILL CLAIM THE SPOILS

Resume of the Remarkable Campaign of 1912—The Governors and Senators Who Will Take Office During the Early Part of the Coming Year.

Locke Craig, Democrat, North Carolina; Simon E. Baldwin, Democrat Connecticut; Eugene N. Foss, Democrat, Massachusetts; Adolph O. Eberhardt, Republican, Minnesota; Coleman L. Blease, Democrat, South Carolina; Ben W. Hooper, Republican-Fusion, Tennessee; Oscar B. Colquitt, Democrat, Texas; William Spry, Republican, Utah; Francis E. McGovern, Republican, Wisconsin; Aram J. Pothier, Republican, Rhode Island; Elias M. Ammons, Democrat, Colorado; Charles R. Miller, Republican, Delaware; Park Trammell, Democrat, Florida; John M. Haines, Republican, Idaho; Edward F. Dunne, Republican, Illinois; Samuel M. Ralston, Democrat, Indiana; George W. Clarke, Republican, Iowa; Woodridge N. Ferris, Democrat, Michigan; Elliott W. Major, Democrat, Missouri; Samuel V. Stewart, Democrat, Montana; John H. Morehead, Democrat, Nebraska; William Sulzer, Democrat, New York; Louis B. Hanna, Republican, North Dakota; James H. Cox, Democrat, Ohio; Frank M. Byrne, Republican, South Dakota; Ernest Lister, Democrat, Washington; Dr. H. D. Hatfield, Republican-Progressive, West Virginia.

No gubernatorial candidate in New Hampshire obtained the necessary plurality, and in consequence the choice of the Governor devolves upon the Legislature. The Republicans will have control of the body and will elect Franklin Worcester to succeed Governor Bass.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—In a physical sense the most remarkable political event that will take place in American politics with the birth of the new year will be the inauguration of Governors in 28 States in the Union.

All but nine of these State's Executives will be new men. Five of the nine who succeed themselves are Republicans and the remaining four are Democrats. Of the Chief Executives in the remaining States, however, 11 are in the Democratic column and 8 are of Republican persuasion. This gives the Democratic party a slight advantage in numbers in the entire 28 States, their party having 15 members coming into office against 13 allotted to the Republican ranks by the voters on November 5.

While not as widely sweeping in political change as the result of the presidential and congressional fight would seem to indicate, the change in the State Legislatures of these States was sufficient to insure a United States Senate with a working majority of the Democratic persuasion. Unofficial, but nevertheless accurate figures compiled by senatorial authorities show that the Democrats will control the organization of that body at least by a majority of two, eliminating all probable contingencies. There is good reason to believe that this majority may be increased to four, and possibly even that it may reach six. The possibility of increased majority, over the two already assured, lies chiefly in the outcome of the balloting in the Illinois Legislature where no party has a majority, and where there must be compromise or combination in order to elect any Senator.

There will be in the next Senate 96 members, of whom 49 will be Democrats, while the best the Republicans can count upon is 45, and they are by no means certain of that number, because of the doubt which exists as to the outcome in two or three States.

There are in the present Senate 51 Republicans, 43 Democrats and two seats are vacant, one from Colorado and one from Illinois. As a result of the late election the Democrats will gain nine Senators, eight of whom will succeed Republicans and one will fill a vacancy from Colorado. Those who will succeed Republicans, or so-called Progressives who were elected as Republicans six years ago, will come from Colorado, Nevada, Oregon, Montana, Kansas, New Jersey, Delaware and Tennessee. This would increase their number to 52 but for the fact that they will lose three seats, one from Idaho, one from Maine and one from West Virginia, so that their net positive gain will be six and fix their assured number at 49.

Should the Democrats elect one member from Illinois their total will be 50 and their majority 4; should they win two from Illinois, one to succeed Senator Cullom and one to fill the Lorimer vacancy, their total will be 51, and their majority 6 over the combined Republican, Progressive, Democrat and nondescript strength.

The line-up of the Senate, including those whose terms do not expire, those who have already been elected by their State Legislatures, and those whose election is indicated by primary choice on March 4 next will be as follows:

- Democrats. Henry F. Ashurst, Arizona; A. O. Bacon, Georgia; John H. Bankhead, Alabama; Nathan P. Bryan, Florida; George W. Chamberlain, Oregon; William E. Chilton, West Virginia; James P. Clarke, Arkansas; Charles A. Culbertson, Texas; Duncan U. Fletcher, Florida; Jeff Davis, Arkansas; Thomas P. Gore, Oklahoma; Gilbert M. Hitchcock, Nebraska; Ollie M. James, Kentucky; Charles F. Johnson, Maine; Joseph F. Johnston, Alabama; John W. Kern, Indiana; Harry Lane, Oregon (primary choice); Luke Lea, Tennessee; Thomas S. Martin, Virginia; James B. Martin, N. J.; Henry L. Myers, Montana; Francis G. Newlands, Nevada; James A. O'Gorman, New York; Lee S. Overman, North Carolina; Robert L. Owen, Oklahoma (primary choice); Atlee Pomerene, Ohio; Key Pittman, Nevada (primary choice); Joseph E. Ransdell, Louisiana; James A. Reed, Missouri; John F. Shafroth (primary choice); Colorado; Morris Sheppard, Texas (primary choice); Benjamin F. Shively, Indiana; F. M. Simmons, North Carolina (primary choice); Marcus A. Smith, Arizona; Hoke Smith, Georgia; John Walter Smith, Maryland; Ellison D. Smith, South Carolina; William J. Stone, Missouri; Claude A. Swanson, Virginia; Charles S. Thomas, Colorado (primary choice for short term); William H. Thompson, Kansas (indicated by primary); John R. Thornton, Louisiana; Benjamin R. Tillman, South Carolina; James K. Vardaman, Mississippi; Thomas J. Walsh, Montana (indicated preference); John S. Williams, Mississippi; Delaware, Democratic Legislature, no choice indicated; Tennessee, Democratic Legislature, no choice indicated.

Total (including Delaware and Tennessee, 49.

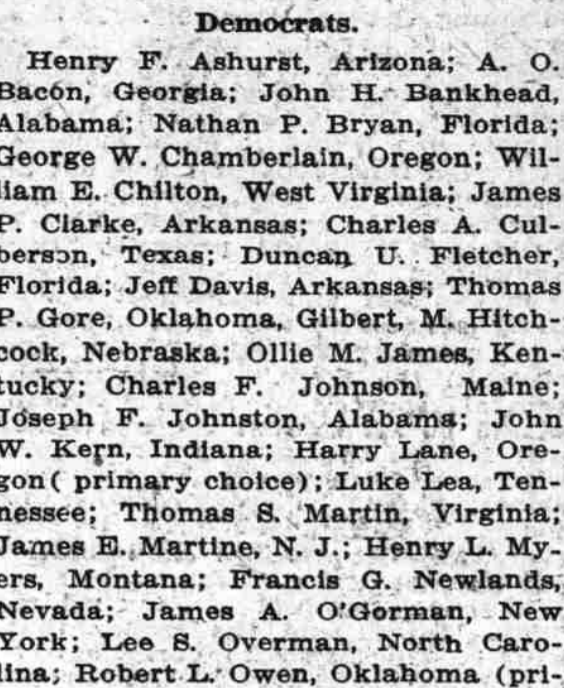

Republicans, Including Progressives and Progressive Republicans. William E. Borah, Idaho; William O. Bradley, Kentucky; Frank Brandegee, Connecticut; Joseph L. Bristow, Kansas; Theodore E. Burton, Ohio; Thomas B. Catron, New Mexico; Moses E. Clapp, Minnesota; Clarence D. Clark, Wyoming; LeBaron B. Coit, Rhode Island; (indicated, but not by primary); Coe I. Crawford, South Dakota; A. B. Cummins, Iowa; William P. Dillingham, Vermont; Henry A. DuPont, Delaware; Albert B. Fall, New Mexico; Jacob H. Gallinger, New Hampshire; Asie J. Gronna, North Dakota; William P. Jackson, Maryland; Wesley L. Jones, Washington; William S. Kenyon, Iowa (primary choice); Robert M. LaFollette, Wisconsin; Henry F. Lippitt, Rhode Island; Henry C. Lodge, Massachusetts; Porter J. McCumber, North Dakota; George P. McLean, Connecticut; Knute Nelson, Minnesota (primary choice); George W. Norris, Nebraska (primary choice); George T. Oliver, Pennsylvania; Carroll S. Page, Vermont; Bolse Penrose, Pennsylvania; George C. Perkins, California; Miles Poindexter, Washington; Ellhu Root, New York; William Alden Smith, Michigan (indicated); Reed Smoot, Utah; Isaac Stephenson, Wisconsin; Thomas Sterling, South Dakota (probable); George Sutherland, Utah; Charles E. Townsend, Michigan; Francis E. Warren, Wyoming (indicated); John D. Works, California.

Idaho, Republican Legislature, but no choice indicated. Maine, Republican Legislature, no candidate certain. Massachusetts, Republican Legislature, probable Senator Samuel W. McCall. New Hampshire, no party has majority in Legislature, Progressives hold balance of power, Senator probably a Republican. West Virginia, Republican Legislature, Senator probably Davis Elkins. Total, 45. As stated, the result in Illinois is in doubt, with the probabilities in favor of one Democrat, and with the possibility of two Democrats. In Kansas, the Democrats have a majority in the Legislature and William H. Thompson was chosen as the primary candidate, but there is said to be some question as to his constitutional eligibility because of the fact that he is now a State judge. In Delaware the Democrats have a majority in the Legislature and the probabilities are that the Senator will be William Saulsbury, although former Senator R. R. Kenney is a candidate. In Tennessee, the Democrats have a majority but the choice is uncertain because of factional fight between the Patterson and anti-Patterson factions. In Maine, former Representative Burlleigh is the Republican nominee, but is not certain of election despite the fact that his party has a majority of the Legislature. In South Dakota there is some doubt owing to the fact that Thomas Sterling, Progressive Republican, received the primary endorsement and Senator Gamble is said to have a majority of the members of the Legislature, but both are Republicans. In the House the Democrats have increased their control through the recent election but through the election of some of their members to the Senate and to a governorship as well as through the retirement of others.

There will be many important changes in a committee organization. The all-important Ways and Means Committee, which is to form the tariff bills for the Wilson administration, has been riddled. Out of the seven Republican members of the committee only two will take their seats in the Sixty-third Congress. These are John Dalzell of Pennsylvania and Samuel McCall of Massachusetts. Of the 14 Democratic members of that committee four will be among the missing. Two of these, however, Hughes of New York and James of Kentucky, go to the Senate.

The election of Morris Sheppard of Texas to the Senate, if seniority takes precedence, will move Representative Burnett of Alabama to the chairmanship of the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee which handles the big public buildings of the "pork barrel" bill.

The Banking and Currency Committee investigating the so-called money trust, will be without a head, Representative Pujo having retired. Representative Carter Glass of Virginia is the ranking member of that committee.

The Public Lands Committee, the Agricultural Committee, and the important Foreign Affairs Committees are some of the other House bodies that will undergo important changes in their personnel. Representative Sulzer of New York, the chairman of the latter committee, has been elected Governor of New York.

Two of the most important matters likely to be legislated into law during the coming year are an income tax and a revision of the tariff. Tariff revision will be one of the first measures considered by the extraordinary session of Congress which President Wilson is expected to call shortly after his inauguration on March 4. The Democratic tariff policy as recently outlined by the leaders contemplates the reduction of duties on imports, to the extent of millions of dollars.

The enactment of an income tax law will come as a result of a fight which has extended over years and is only now nearing fruition through the ratification of a proposed amendment to the Constitution which, it is expected, will have been accepted by the necessary three-fourths of the States in the Union early in January.

To date 34 States in the Union have ratified this amendment out of a necessary 36. The amendment in effect grants Congress the power to levy an income tax, without apportionment among the several States and without a census of enumeration. Its adoption would serve in a great measure to balance any reduction in tariff schedules made by the Democrats.

The States that have officially approved of the amendment are: Alabama, Arkansas, Arizona, California, Colorado, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Washington and Wisconsin. Unofficially Ohio and Louisiana.
