NO THIRD PARTY IS NEEDED.

THAT IS WHAT PRESIDENT ROGERS, OF FLORIDA, SAYS

Democratic Party for the People—To Go into a Third Party Would Be to Render Efforts at Reform Helpless and Fruitless.

State Chronicle.

The Chronicle has already stated that president Rogers, of the Florida State Alliance, opposes any third party. We quote from his address: The Alliance is non-partisan, but not non-political, for those who constitute the membership have long been regarded as an important factor in politics; but now that the farmers have organized to educate themselves in science of economic government and are finding out the cause of their oppression and asking for the needed relief, the money powers and the political task masters have become agitated and a fear of dethronement creeps over their wakeful vision and rises before them like Banquo's ghost. The loss of place and power are usually feared like the loss of a child.

The Alliance, I said, was non-partisan, because a farmer, farm laborer, any white person of mature age, of moral habits and good character, whose chief interest is that farming, is eligible to membership in our order, regardless of his religious or political inclinations, and it is not the purpose of the Alliance to abridge the right of any member in exercising the right of franchise of religious liberty.

THE THIRD PARTY.

A meeting of citizens from several States was held in Cincinnati on the 19th and 20th of last May and a platform of purposes was adopted which, among other things, including the Ocala Alliance platform. They designated themselves "the People's party." By a careful study of the men who were leaders in that meeting it will be seen that many of them had been discarded by either the Democratic or Republican party. It is noted with regret that there are members of the Alliance in several counties of this State who are in full sympathy and hearty accord with "the third party movement"—with regret, I say, because—first, we are all sorry to see any division in the ranks of the order; second, because we regard the Democratic party as the friend of the people; third, because we believe that 90 per cent. of the members of the Alliance in this State are Democrats and therefore have it largely in their power to cleanse the Democratic party of any imperfections it may have and make it a party for the people; and, last but not least, if every member of the Alliance in this State were to stand united in a third party they could not possibly elect a State officer; hence their efforts would be hopeless and fruitless.

My opinions, as expressed three years ago, are not yet changed in this matter. I believe that it is the duty of every member of the Alliance to labor for "equal rights to all and special favors to none," and, all other things being equal, to vote to nominate and place in office men whose interests are identical with ours, and, when practicable, those who are identified and in sympathy with our order. We do not consider this selfish in the Alliance, nor insistent toward other professions, when we remember that out of four hundred and seventeen members of the last Congress fourteen of the number were said to be engaged in nothing but farming; hence we see that over thirteen millions of farmers and farm laborers had fourteen representatives in Congress!

In sections of the country where the Republican party dominates let them elect men of either party who are identified with us, and, ninety-nine times out of a hundred a Republican will act with a democrat in the enactment of laws, when their interests are identical. We have only to allude to the free coinage of silver to prove this position. Democrats and Republicans of the West favor, and Democrats and Republicans of the East oppose.

We need no third party to accomplish the needed reforms for the relief of the agriculturists of this country. The farmers only need to stand united and persevere in all reasonable demands, and the necessary relief will be given them.

NO PAY, NO VERDICT.

A Connecticut Jury Refuse to Announce Their Decision Until Pay is Raised.

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., Oct. 31.—A remarkable exhibition of thrift on the part of six jurymen was noted in the trial of the case of Rood agt., Lockman before Justice of the Peace James T. Lynch in this place a few days ago. Rood sued Lockman to recover a small sum of money in payment for services he had rendered to the defendant, and latter pleaded an "offset" from the amount of the bill, charging that Rood had "neglected his [Lockman's] interests," and on account of "various articles plaintiff had taken from Lockman," while he was in the latter's employ. Nevertheless, the trial dragged on for several days, and the legal contest was a hot one. Finally the evidence was all taken, counsel made long and elaborate argument, and late in evening Judge Lynch charged the jury. The jury took the papers in the case and retired into the jury room, but were not there very long when the court officers bustled into the room and informed his Honor that the jury had reached a verdict and refused to render it.

"What's the matter with them?" inquired Judge Lynch. "Why won't they render the verdict?"

"Because," replied the officer solemnly, "they are afraid they won't get paid for their services." The officer was sent back to reason with the jurymen, but their reply was: "No pay, no verdict." The trouble was, the foreman explained, that the case would certainly be appealed, and was like to drag along for four or five years before there was a final decision in it, and we don't propose to wait for our money," he added.

Then Judge Lynch suggested to the contestants that it looked as though the money must be raised if they wanted a verdict, whereupon they scurried about and got money enough to pay the jury, declaring that Lockman must pay Rood $71 1/2 and costs. It was a surprise to every one. Lockman at once appealed the case to the Superior Court.

Progress in Aerial Navigation.

Engineering Magazine.

Man gazes at the birds and longs to imitate them. His success has been small; still, within the last decade, a balloon has been driven against a moderate wind, and a man is said to have flown a hundred yards near Paris, so that, as Prof. Langley says, the problem of aerial navigation is about to pass into the hands of the engineers. It is an intricate and fascinating problem, and first attracted the poets and dreamers. It is only within the last century that it has been taken up by scientific investigators. Besides the men of science here and in Europe who are investigating the natural laws of flight and of air resistances, there are now probably some scores of sane inventors, besides very many cranks, who are making experiments in the same direction. These may be divided into two classes—the aeronauts, who are seeking to drive balloons through the air, and the aviators, who hope to imitate the birds, and fly by purely dynamical means.

One of the chief obstacles to success has been the want of a motive power sufficiently light in proportion to its energy to compare favorably with that of birds. All engines have hitherto from 65 to 130 lbs. per horse-power, including supplies for two hours; but Mr. Hiram S. Maxim, inventor of the Maxim automatic gun, announces that he has constructed and tested two compound steam engines, weighing with their steam generator only 950 lbs., capable of developing 300 horse-power, and already known to give 120 horse-power of useful effect upon an aerial machine which he is constructing. Mr. Maxim has nearly completed in England a flying-machine 110 feet across, and weighing 5,500 lbs., from which he expects 50 to 100 miles per hour. All these hopes may fall of immediate realization, but we are slowly drifting towards a practical solution of the problem.

In his recent speech at Salisbury Congressman Henderson gave prominence to the fact that the appropriations last year for pensions exceeded $133,000,000, and that the pension list was growing at the rate of 25,000 per month, nearly a generation after the war 100 new names were added to every 13 dropped, the increase beating the decrease 1 to 8. The figures show that twice as many Federal soldiers have been pensioned as there were Confederates in service during the whole war.

GENERAL NEWS.

NEWSY ITEMS OF INTEREST TO OUR READERS.

The Work of Pencil, Shears and Paste-Pot Through Our Mail and Exchanges for the Last Week—News In and Out of the State.

The Alliance of Newberry county, S. C., has repudiated the Ocala platform.

MONMOUTH, Ill., October 21.—Five persons were killed and fifty or sixty injured in a railroad wreck here at 1 o'clock morning on the Burlington road.

Mr. John Dillon, one of the most prominent Irish Home Rulers, trusts Mr. Gladstone, and says he does not believe Ireland would unite under Redmond. He believes in Gladstone's sincerity. But can Ireland afford to distrust or to break with the great English statesman? The game of some is to help defeat the Gladstonians. They will do a very bad thing for Ireland when they enter upon such work. To turn upon their long tested friend would be base ingratitude so long as he showed a willingness to stand longer by Ireland. It would be most unwise—as unwise as for the Democrats in North Carolina to divide and thus help to elect the Radicals.

Rev. Dr. Arthur C. Dill, at Morristown, N. J., had some enemies who had conspired against him to his injury and undoing. He employed a literary and gifted detective to hunt them down and uncover their machinations. This was done most successfully. The detective turned preacher and preached three acceptable sermons to the Doctor's congregation. There was a plot to tar and feather the pastor and to drive him in disgrace from the town. Several conspirators were successfully bagged, were indicted by the grand jury and four have made a confession. A government employee and a magistrate are implicated.

Farmers' Alliances and other rural organizations will be provided for in special building at the World's Fair. It is intended that the farmers shall have nothing of which to complain in regard to their reception and treatment by the World's Fair management. They will be afforded quarters in the Live Stock Assembly Hall, plans for which have just been completed. The building will stand south of the colonnade connecting the Agricultural and Machinery Buildings in the south end of the park. On the first floor will be office-room for cattle and horse associations, dog and pot stock associations, and all remaining live-stock organizations. On the second floor will be an assembly hall 172 feet long and 74 feet wide. Here the farmers will be given a chance to hold meetings. Special rooms are provided for the Farmers' Alliance, the National Grange, and similar associations. The entire structure has been so planned as to give the farmers and live-stock men generally all they could ask in the way of accommodations at the World's Fair. The building will, in form, resemble the letter T, one portion being 500 feet long, and the other 200 feet.—Davie Times.

Got Lost in Raleigh.

The News and Observer of a recent date says: A man apparently about 23 years old approached Officer McCullers, of the police force, and with tears in his eyes and frightened expression stated to the officer that he was lost. That he had never been in a city before in his life, that he had come with some friends and got separated from them, and that he did not know what to do or where to go. The officer gave him such information as he could to straighten him out and assisted him to find his friends. This beats the record.

A Little Girl's Experience in a Lighthouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of the Government Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter, four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful cough and turning into a Fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones." Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at Burwell & Dunn's Drug Store.

The consciousness of having a remedy at hand for croup, pneumonia, sore throat, and sudden colds, is very consoling to a parent. With a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, one feels, in such cases, a sense of security nothing else can give.

A Contrast.

Two men toiled side by side from sun to sun.

And both were poor:
Both sat with children, when the day was done,
About their door.

One saw the beautiful in crimson cloud,
And shuning moon:
The other, with his head in sadness bowed,
Made night of noon.

One loved each tree and flower and singing bird

On mount or plain:
No music in the soul of one was stirred
By leaf or rain.

One saw the good in every fellow-man,

And hoped the best:
The other marvelled at his Master's plan,
And doubt confessed.

One, having heaven above and heaven below,

Was satisfied:
The other, discontented lived in woe,
And hopeless died.

A HOUSE'S MEMORY.

How He Remembered An Old Acquaintance After Ten Years.

"About nineteen years ago Dr. Walton bought a pair of chestnut sorrel horses for $500," said Tom Felts to the Nashville American man, "and after keeping them a short time he sold one of them for $150 to Mr. Teasley. I bought him from Mr. Teasley for $150, and for nine years that horse and I lived together nearly all the time.

"Part of the time I lived in the country and one rainy night the loft of the stable with sixty-five barrels of corn in it, fell in and pinned that horse down to the ground so that he could hardly move. I did not hear the crash, but I afterward found out it occurred about midnight. Next morning I went out to the stable, and it nearly broke my heart to see the horse that I loved better than anybody or anything in this world in such a fix. He lay perfectly still, I thought he was dead, and I couldn't help crying. After awhile we got out, and just know from the way he rubbed his nose against me that he knew how much I loved him, and how I had suffered to see him pinned down to the ground that way with sixty-five barrels of corn on top of him.

"About ten years ago I sold the horse to Stirling Walker, and he promised not to sell him any more. But after he had kept him along time he traded him to a man up in Springfield, who afterward sold him at public auction down here on the Square. A man named Griggs, in North Nashville, bought him, and now I'm going to tell you something funny.

"Day before yesterday I was passing along Buena Vista street when I saw a horse standing on the other side of the street. I wasn't thinking about anything in particular, and just walked on. First I knew that horse had crossed the street and was rubbing his nose against me. 'Twas my old horse, and he hadn't seen me in ten years. But he had remembered me."

A Story from Rockingham.

The Wilmington Review reports an instance of a sad and peculiar nature in Rockingham. Some time ago the wife of a resident of that section eloped with another man. They took with them the seven-year-old son of the wife and went to South Carolina, in the seaboard section. There the man died on Saturday and the woman followed on Monday. The little boy was left alone and was found in this condition by colored people, who informed the sheriff. The latter ascertained the name of the boy's father, and where he lived, and notified him of the fact. The father went to South Carolina and took his son home again to Rockingham. He said he was glad that both the man and the woman were dead, as it saved him the necessity of killing them both, which he swears he would surely have done if he had ever come across them in the flesh.
