Catarrh Cannot Be Cured
with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarrh. Send for testimonials, free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O. CONCENTRATION CAMP AT QUEENS-FERRY IS A MODEL

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Chester, England, Dec. 2.—The concentration camp at Queensferry, ten miles from Chester, now contains more than 2,200.

The camp is housed in a score of spacious factory buildings formerly occupied by a firm of boiler-makers. The buildings set aside for dormitory purposes are divided into "wards," "blocks," and "bays." All the buildings are solidly built, and the sleeping and living quarters are by no means crowded, the number of men in each ward being dictated by the cubic feet of air space, with due consideration for matters of light, ventilation and heating.

A central heating plant, formerly the factory power house, furnishes steam heat and hot water for all the buildings. There are wash houses with hot and cold showers at convenient points about the camp.

The men have shown considerable interest in decorating their rooms. Some of the wards, containing from four to ten men, are decorated in alleged imitation of familiar hotels, ships or streets. Sign boards, painted with more or less elaboration, direct the visitor to "Villa Emden"—an imitation of the famous German cruiser, "Stadt Hamburg," "Unter den Linden," and "Windsor Castle."

Each man is provided with three blankets and mattress for his bunk. There are a few "day rooms," fitted up for lounging and for indoor games such as checkers, dominoes, chess and cards. No gambling is allowed.

The hospital contains provisions for twenty-five patients and is amply equipped with medical and surgical appliances. A resident medical officer is in charge, with two sanitary officers who continually inspect all parts of the camp. Every new prisoner is submitted to a rigid examination, and the medical officer keeps regular office hours, during which any resident may consult him without charge. Every man whom he sees is given a card on which are entered his name, the nature of his complaint, and the prescribed treatment. Cases of severe illness are sent to civil hospitals in London. The general health of the camp has been excellent.

The camp postoffice handles about 2,500 outgoing letters each week, and a rather larger amount of incoming mail. All letters are read by censors, and outgoing mail is limited to two letters a man per week. No letter may be longer than can be written on two sides of an ordinary sheet of notepaper. The censorship of incoming mail has caused some annoying delays; letters from Germany are often in a handwriting difficult to decipher. Letters from the United States are more satisfactory, a large proportion of them are in typewriting and many are of purely business character. Nothing relating to the war passes the censors.

There is a camp library, from which residents may borrow books of varied character. Newspapers are forbidden in all the camps. Facilities are given by the postoffice for the receipt of money, and all sums are accounted for and paid out as the prisoner directs. Prisoners who have money can take full advantage of the "canteen," where special tariff lists for purchases of all kinds are posted.

Much of the routine work of governing the camps is done by the prisoners themselves. There is a head captain for each "block," a captain for each "bay," and the various bays are again broken up into messes, under charge of petty officers. All these officers are chosen by vote of the men themselves. The captains and head captains hold stated meetings at which they consider and adopt regulations for the conduct of camp affairs.

The commandant and his adjutant have office hours during which they may be seen on any matters which the captains wish to bring to their attention. Any prisoner is privileged to appeal for the remedy of grievances.

The occupations with which the men busy themselves are as various as the callings and trades represented. A number of men devote themselves to constructing models of steam or sailing ships, and derive some profit from their skill by offering their handiwork to the highest bidders. Some with a less mechanical turn undertake outside work, such as leveling, laying ashes, using the tar brush and painting. An attempt has been made by the trade unions to put a stop to this activity on the ground that the laborers are not paid Union rates. A few men occupy their leisure in painting water colors.

There is plenty of opportunity for sports. Football and boxing are popular, and prisoners without skill at these sports occupy themselves at simple outdoor games, some of them quite juvenile in character. Model boat sailing on a small sheet of water adjoining the compound has a number of devotees.

German and Austrian schoolmasters, university graduates, and college professors have united to form the faculty of a camp school, which offers day and evening classes for men and boys. The average daily and nightly attendance is very high, especially in the lecture courses. The curriculum is on the lines of "higher education," including courses in theology, history,

English literature and language, mathematics and navigation.

The camp has a brass band, an orchestra, and several glee clubs. Several squads have been organized for gymnastic and military drill, and there are occasional exhibitions by prisoners of gymnastics and acrobatics.

Religious services are held on Sunday by both Catholics and Protestants. One of the prisoners is a German pastor. He was given a chance of release but preferred to remain, declaring that he could do better work within the camp than outside. Officers interned in the camp enjoy some special privileges, and are generally provided with servants of their own nationality. They are paid in accordance with the provisions of The Hague Convention—half the pay of British officers of the same rank plus a small rations allowance. Thus, assuming the pay of a British infantry captain to be three dollars a day, the German officer of corresponding rank at Queensferry receives $1.50 a day, plus rations.

The regulation ration of food daily in the camp is one and a half pounds of bread, half a pound of meat, two ounces of sugar, one ounce of coffee or half an ounce of tea, eight ounces of fresh vegetables, two ounces of lentil peas, one ounce of butter or margarine, table condiments, and one tin of condensed milk to every twenty men. Lentil soup is occasionally added as the first course of the midday meal. Trained cooks prepare all rations under the superintendence of a chief steward.

To the Rescue in Blood Diseases

Just the Help Needed to Overcome Worst Troubles.

In S. S. S., the famous blood purifier, is the greatest natural blood repairer known. It is an antidote for germs, that once let loose, multiply so fast that a definite disease is apparent overnight. And yet so powerful is the influence of S. S. S., that like a vast army it spreads all through blood, checks disease, opens up all the valves of escape and throws out disease through the lungs, kidneys, bladder, bowels and skin.

Do not become panic stricken if a rash or boils or eruptions inflame the skin. Nature is doing her best but Nature is not the same time calling for help, and in S. S. S. is just the kind of help Nature demands, for it is a pure vegetable remedy with an action that vigorously follows the blood channels and cleans and repairs as it goes along. In every community are people who know this to be true. They have used S. S. S. and are blood clean, through and through.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. today at any drug store. Drive out those destructive germs that cause skin eruptions, sore throat, swollen glands, blood risings, painful rheumatic joints, chronic bronchitis and most all conditions of disease. Read the folder around the bottle that tells about the great work being done to assist sufferers. If you would know more about the blood and its treatment, write for special book to The Swift Specific Co., 52 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.
