THE WORLD'S VICTORIA CROSSES

Great Britain may well feel proud and boast of her military decoration, the Victoria Cross, which is only for conspicuous acts of bravery on the field of battle.

France confers her distinctive badge in the well known form of the Legion of Honor.

Austria confers her Ancient Order of Marie Therese.

Germany's equivalent of the Victoria Cross is the Iron Cross, which, it is said, the Kaiser has already given to 38,000 of his soldiers in the present war.

Russia distributes her Cross of St. Vladimir sparingly to her successful soldiers.

Denmark has one of the most illustrious orders of chivalry, the Order of the Elephant, which ranks even with that of our Order of the Garter.

Spain is truly proud of her Order of the Golden Fleece, which is, and has been, most sparingly conferred.

Italy never fails to decorate her soldiers with her military medal of merit.—From Tit-Bits.

IN A BEAUTIFUL CEREMONY MISS EDITH OVERCARSH AND MR. J. H. THOMPSON COVENANT IN MARRIAGE.

A wedding in which centered the affectionate interest of hundreds of friends, and which was attended with rare beauty of setting and social charm was that in which Miss Edith Deborah Overcarsh and Mr. James Henry Thomson plighted troth and took the covenant vows of marriage last evening, the ceremony taking place at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bryan J. Overcarsh, West Eighth street, Rev. Dr. E. K. McLarty of Tryon Street Methodist church officiating.

Southern smilax in greatest profusion, white candles, and white chrysanthemums formed the foundation for a most exquisite effect wrought by the skilled hands of the bride's father, a decorator of note. Chandeliers and mantles were covered with smilax. Light was furnished by white wax candles, as many as 500 being used throughout the wedding suite. The candles, in rows, were set amidst the smilax on the mantles in the parlor, living room and dining room, made a continuous row of light around the latter room being set on the plate rail which was banked with smilax. The effect was so charming that one involuntarily said, "How beautiful."

The immediate bridal setting was beautiful and elaborate, having been planned and executed by Mr. Overcarsh. Against the east wall was erected a white canopy resting on two large white columns, and extending over four feet out. A lattice work of white rods tipped with silver balls, with gates, was arranged under the canopy, the gates opening toward the bridal aisle. The lattice and gates were hung with dainty trailers of vines and flowers. The minister stood under the canopy, within the gates, immediately behind a white satin prieu-dieu on which the young couple knelt for the benediction. To either side of the canopy altar were cathedral candles in brass candleabra.

On this feast of artistic skill and beauty of decorative effect the wedding guests feasted their eyes until the first notes of Lohengrin announced the bridal hour—8:30.

Mr. W. Harvey Overcarsh, kinsman of the bride, was at the piano. As the inspiring notes were heard, the bridal aisle was formed with the ribbon being run from the dining room through the living room and across the hall to the parlor ending at the floral gates under the wedding canopy, the ribbons being carried by Miss Edith Creasy of Wilmington, and Miss Sarah Love, both dainty and pretty in white batiste and lace and pink ribbons. Following them was Miss Matilda Overcarsh, twin sister of the bride and maid of honor, who passed through the bridal aisle and pausing for a moment in front of the bridal gates opened them for the coming of the bride and groom. She wore an exquisite gown of pink accordion plaited silk with bodice and short tunic of Princess lace. In her hair, beautifully arranged, was a paradise aigrette. A pearl necklace was around her neck and on her arm was an immense bunch of pink Killarney's. After opening the bridal gates, she passed to the left, standing immediately outside of the lattice. The ring bearer, little Miss Bonnie Creasy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Creasy, of Wilmington, came in next. Pretty and dainty, she wore white batiste and lace with pink ribbon, and carried the ring on a silver plate. She passed inside the gates standing to the right of the minister.

The bride entered with her father, the latter in full evening dress with boutonniere of lilies of the valley, they passing through the ribbons to the floral gates where the groom with his best man, his brother, Mr. E. H. Thomson, of Atlanta, was in waiting.

The bride was attired in a modish traveling suit of midnight blue cloth, with pink chiffon waist and Medici collar of real black thread lace. Her hat was of black velvet with fur and gaura trimming. Her flowers—a corsage bouquet—were Bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

The wedding tableau was perfect—a more beautiful one seldom being seen. During the very pretty ceremony of the Methodist church, impressively read by Dr. McLarty, Mr. Overcarsh rendered the "Swan Song," very softly. As the happy young couple knelt for the minister's blessing there was a hush, which was to be followed in a minute by a burst of music, merriment and felicitations the very happiest.

A beautiful reception followed, which was attended by about 200 guests. The wedding table showed a color scheme of white and pink, the latter in tulle, which extended from the chandelier to the corners of the table, falling in graceful loops to the floor, with dainty tracings of maiden hair ferns here and there on the tulle. In the center of the table was a pink basket of white Killarney roses, and to either side a cut glass comport, holding mints, and tied with pink tulle. The chandelier was a mass of pink tulle and smilax. And encircling the table, as a ring, were candles on the plate rail, burning brilliantly, but softly. Ices and cake were served in the dining room and punch in a cozy corner under the stairway.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomson left almost immediately after the ceremony for a trip to Washington and Baltimore. On their return they will reside at the Overcarsh home for the present.

The bride is an unusually pretty, attractive and charming girl, she and her twin sister, Miss Matilda Overcarsh, being notably sweet, lovely girls.

Both were educated at Queens College. The bride is gifted in the art of expression and is bright, versatile and winsome. She is a granddaughter of the late Dr. W. S. Creasy, a distinguished minister of the Methodist church.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Thomson, formerly of Durham, now of Greensboro, prominent in the social life of both cities.

Coming from Durham to Charlotte several years ago, Mr. Thomson became associated with the Cotton Belt Candy Company, which position, by his splendid integrity, business ability, Candy Company in which position, by his firm, he has intrenched himself very strongly. He is held in high and affectionate esteem by his business associates.

Out-of-town guests present at the wedding were Mrs. Edith Creasy, grandmother of the bride, from Mount Airy; Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Thomson, of Durham; Mr. E. H. Thomson, of Atlanta; Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Creasy and daughters, Misses Edith, Alberta and Bonnie Creasy, and Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Creasy, of Wilmington; Miss Eleanor Maxwell and Mr. D. G. Maxwell, jr., of Columbia, S. C.

C. Proctor, Prominent Citizen of Lincoln Dead; Revolutionary Ancestry

Mr. C. Proctor, of Denver, Lincoln county, died last night at 10 o'clock. He was about 65 years of age. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Proctor, and two daughters, Mrs. John Proctor and Mrs. John Proctor.

side, for years. The deceased leaves Messrs. A. M. Proctor and A. R. Proctor, brothers, and Mrs. James Nixon, sister, all of Denver.

Just after the civil war the Proctor brothers established themselves in business on the Lincoln county side of Beattie's ford, and did a successful business here until about the year 1876, when they founded Denver. Denver was then known as Dry Pond, but it was not long after the Proctors went there until it became a flourishing little village, with good schools and an ambition to become a large town. Mr. Proctor is well known in commercial circles, not only in Charlotte, but in the Northern cities, where he made it a custom to go once a year to lay in goods, and his death will be a source of sorrow to his many friends.

Mr. Proctor's mother was Elizabeth King, the granddaughter of John King, a revolutionary patriot and close friend of Gen. George Washington. Being a tailor by trade, he made Gen. Washington's clothes before and after the Revolutionary war.

Mr. Brevard Nixon, a nephew of the deceased, will attend the funeral services at Bethel church, near Denver, tomorrow at 10 o'clock.
