HUNDREDS DRINK MILK OF JERSEYS County Observed Week and Dairy Product Was Dispensed Here.

Her serene majesty, the docile, cud-chewing Jersey was the subject of national attention last week and her representatives in Mecklenburg county came in for a share of the attention. National Jersey week was celebrated here and in every other part of the United States. Here the celebration took the form of a campaign conducted in the city under the auspices of the Mecklenburg County Co-operative Jersey Breeders' Association and personally conducted by Robert Basinger, official tester of the Mecklenburg County Cow Testing Organization, which is encouraging Jersey breeding and dairying in the county by endeavoring to raise the standard of breeding among dairymen in the county. The organization is one within the Jersey Breeders' organization and it maintains an official tester whose duty it is to keep track of the records made each month by cows belonging to members of the association. During the week booths were placed at different centers of the city and free glasses of butter milk and sweet milk offered to people coming into the places. In some cases the milk was offered with cakes and wafers. The records show that Tuesday the booth at Ivey's department store dispensed 30 gallons of milk to 700 people. Cakes were offered with the milk this having been the most popular of the Ivey dining room, and the novelty immediately became popular with the people coming into the store. Wednesday 15 gallons of sweet milk were given away to 350 people. Thursday at Belk Brother's department store 20 gallons were given away to 500 people. The same day seven and a half gallons were served at the Kiwanis club luncheon. Friday 15 gallons were given away at the Miller Van Ness store serving cakes to go with the milk handed out there. Saturday five gallons were given to patrons at the Guthery dining room, with 100 people accepting the proffered milk. All told 92 1/2 gallons of milk was given to 2,100 people. About 300 Jersey cattle are now owned in Mecklenburg county, according to C. E. Miller, farm demonstration agent, which are either purebred or grade cattle with a major Jersey strain in them. One of the finest bulls in the country, it is claimed, is owned in the county, being the joint property of Canlier & Irwin, and McIlwaine & Scholtz. The aristocratic bull is Fogs of the Diggs farm, sired by Fogs 9th, of the Hood farm, of Massachusetts. He is valued at $2,500. Russell Boyd, one of the boys enrolled in the calf club of Mecklenburg county, has the distinction of having the first two-year old heifer in the state in the register-of-merit class and owned by a club. WHICH IS WHICH? New Bedford, Mass.—The fine distinction between the meanings of "residence" and "home" was the principle involved in the trial of Eugene H. Vien, millionaire proprietor of several hotels, accused of renting rooms to transients without requiring them to write the addresses in the register. His attorneys argued that the guests' "residences" were the cities where they lived. Special Judge James P. Doran, however, held with the policemen, that the street addresses were necessary, and finding Vien guilty, fined him $100. Vien appealed.

IREDELL COUNTY HOME AN ASSET Model Farm For the Aged and Infirm Pays Dividend into the Treasury

Statesville, June 4.—One of Iredeed county's greatest assets is the magnificent home which has been provided for its aged and infirm. The property contains 240 acres of land and is located six miles south of Statesville on the Charlotte road. The home was established 90 years ago. Thirteen years ago, five modern brick buildings were erected a short distance from the site of the original home. The present plant, which is recognized as one of the finest in the state, has five brick buildings with electric lights, water, sewerage and all modern conveniences installed and two substantial wooden buildings. In some quarters the home is nothing short of a disgrace, but it is not the case in Iredeed, where a class of its citizens are provided with a home in the interest and comforts of a modern home. The writer had the pleasure of a brief visit to the Iredeed county home yesterday. In fact, an eye-opening to look over the plant and see how it is accomplished on the farm under the skillful direction of W. C. Perry, who has been superintendent of the institution for the past 15 years. The inmates are comfortably quartered and are happy in their home-like surroundings. The neatness with which the rooms of the inmates are kept would credit to the housekeepers of private homes. Two of the inmates have been in the home for the past 60 years; one has been there for 25 years. It is a real home to them. The infirmary, a handsome brick structure, has been built upon the site of the sick; and another commodious building has been fitted up for the use of the mentally defective.

WONDERFUL PROGRESS. A glimpse at the farm, orchard and vineyard showed wonderful progress. Mr. Perry has 60 acres in red clover, the field is literally covered with alfalfa. Large shocks of the finest hay that can be produced. Fifty acres are in wheat and the "golden grain" is now about ready for the reaper. Two crops have been cut already on the plot; many acres in rye, oats and corn. The crop outlook so far is very good.

600 SPARROWS KILLED. Six hundred English sparrows were reported killed in Statesville during the contest ending Saturday. The campaign against these destructive little pests was put on by the Civic League, of which Mrs. T. E. Anderson is president. Prizes amounting to $15 were offered for sparrow heads, eggs or nests. The winner of the first prize of $10 was Mack Gray, Jr., who secured 174 sparrow heads and eggs. The second prize, $5, went to Charles Lester, who turned in 300 pounds of nests. The boys of the town took considerable interest in the contest. Mrs. Anderson presented the prizes to the boys in brief address in which she urged the boys the importance of their growing into law-abiding citizens and doing all they can to make the city clean in every respect.

NOT SO SERIOUS. Paris.—Unemployment in France is not so serious as many are reporting. There are at present about 180,000 unemployed and only 72,000 of these are receiving out-of-work pay. Reports received in Paris from all the important industrial districts show that industry is gradually recovering from the effects of the war. The cost of materials having now considerably decreased building is to be actively pushed along particularly the building of living quarters so as to ease, if possible, the shortage of houses both in Paris and in the provinces. A resumption in the motor building industry is also reported as well as in the shoe-making business where the retail prices of shoes now show a slight decrease.

HIKES FROM SEATTLE Paris—Parisians basking in the sunshine on the Champs Elysees were recently intrigued by the sudden appearance in the middle of the avenue of the bare-headed and bare-footed pedestrian making his way toward the Place de la Concorde. Several interested spectators halted the man and asked whether he came. Wearing khaki trousers and shirt and carrying a heavy roll pack on his shoulders the walker, Hippolyte Martineau, wore a sash across his body on which was inscribed "Globe Trotter, Seattle, New York, Europe, the World."

LIFE SAVER DE LUXE. Paris.—A lifebelt, to which are attached a propeller and sail, has been invented by a Frenchman, Mercorelli, and has passed several successful tests. The propeller is worked by an arrangement like an enlarged sewing machine handle fixed on an upper bar. There is a saddle on which the ship-wrecked mariner will sit, his feet just protruding through the lifebelt. Presumably, all he has to do is hoist himself on the queer machine—and looks like a hobby horse—and drive it to the nearest shore. When the physical effort to work the propeller becomes too much, he hoists his sails and sits back at ease.
