A DRESSER WAS HE

His trousers were short that she might see his silken socks unpaid for. The shirt of silk adorned his manly breast and his three dollar tie proclaimed his artistic taste and his utter disregard of mere matters of money or credit. She said "just speak to Papa" and to papa he strode with those same socks of silk, that same shirt that spurned the cotton field, and with that rainbow tie.

"How many shares do you carry with Keesler and the Mutual?" None. I don't like to bother with little things like that. That's for working people.
"Is your suit paid for, and what did it cost." It cost $75.00 and I'm paying for it monthly, that is I'm going to start on it next month. "How about your socks and handsome tie and lovely shirt?" have an account and don't have to pay cash.

"Do you belong to the clubs? Oh, yes, I'm a member of all the best clubs and entertain in approved style. "How about the church, and do you help your parents in their struggles?" I'm a member, but don't go in for sissy stuff very strong. Don't have the time. As for the old folks, they don't bother me, and I have my own affairs to look after. "How much have you saved during the last 5 years?" Well, I haven't saved anything yet, but I'm going to start when I'm married. PAPA TOOK HIM SOFTLY to the door and said "I've worked hard for what I have, and I'm willing to support Susan as long as she lives, but if she even wanted to marry a feller of your stripe I'd be tempted to disown her. You're just a simple, ordinary fool, and hunting for a support. Go learn something of real life and some day you may be able to marry a self-respecting girl. That's what our matrimonial bureau did for him.
