EDNA KENT FORBES
SCIENTIFIC SCALP MASSAGE.

Many people pretend that the only value in using hair tonics is the stimulation that the necessary massage gives to the scalp. This is not entirely true. Certain conditions of the scalp can be overcome only by the use of proper tonics when only a very little bit of rubbing is used. These could not be overcome with even the most faithful massage.

A combination of both is the best. First out what your scalp needs in the way of ointments or tonics and use them faithfully. At the same time give the scalp sufficient massage to keep it stimulated.

A little should be done every day, no matter how unscientifically. When the hair is taken down at night it should be shaken out and the fingers rubbed quickly over the scalp, itself between the hair and to stimulate the circulation of the blood.

The scientific way of massaging is to draw the hands through the hair so the thumbs rest against the back of the head and then with the four fingers of each hand to manipulate the scalp with a rotary motion—that is, the fingers do not move over the scalp, but instead they make the scalp itself move. This loosens it—literally stretch it a bit, so that there is room beneath the skin for a tiny layer of fat from which the roots of the hair can draw their nourishment. The thumbs, which serve as an anchor, are moved from place to place, so that the fingers can cover the whole scalp; placed in front of each ear they allow the fingers to massage the front and top of the head, and held against the neck they allow massage of the lower back of the head.

If the massage is done with a tonic so much the better. This treatment faithfully done in youth will keep the hair young in middle age.

Sally—That rash on your chin will likely disappear if you take two yeast cakes each day. You may take them spread over crackers and eat as you would sandwiches, or they can be dissolved in a half glass of water.

V. M. T.—Deep breathing will fill out the hollows in your shoulders and chest. Massage a good cream into this neck every night, which will nourish it. Use cold water or ice on your skin after removing all soil from the pores.

H. H.—The space here is too limited to give you directions. Send an addressed stamped envelope.

G. G. G.—A weak solution of boracic acid is used as an eye wash, and the druggist will direct you.

Flesh—The menu you send is good and will assist you in reducing, provided the dinner is also well chosen. Eliminate the starchy foods, sugar and fat meats. Your bread should be bran, graham or gluten. Reduction through drugs is injurious to health.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—The Editor.

SON OF KAISER VILLAGE SMITH

In Bad Weather Former Crown Prince Handles Hammer at Anvil.

BY ROBERT POULAIN, Staff Correspondent of the International News Service and Petit Journal.

Weseringen, June 24.—The former crown prince of Germany has taken to blacksmithing to while away the idle hours in bad weather, and it was in the blacksmith shop of his boon companion that I found him when I visited Weseringen.

He was standing before the anvil, his face illuminated by the glowing coals, sleeves rolled up, in sport knickerbockers, with heavy wool stockings. My visit did not seem to surprise him in the least.

"One minute," he said, "and I will be with you."

The iron was now red hot, and he had to take advantage of it. He brought down the hammer a few times; there was a shower of sparks, a hissing sound in the tub of water, and the job was done.

Frederick Wilhelm rubbed his hands with a satisfied air, removed his oil-skin jacket and a cyclist's cap pulled down upon his hair, which still remains blond.

The blacksmith himself, greatly embarrassed, consulted with his wife over the best way to receive me and the photographer who accompanied me. But the ex-crown prince solved the difficulty himself, and five minutes later we were seated in the dining room of Mr. Luijt, the blacksmith, around an imposing pitcher of beer.

"Mr. Hohenzollern" didn't change his attitude a bit when he learned that I was a Frenchman and that I was a newspaperman.

"So you are from Paris?" he said. "Well, give us the latest gossip of the French capital. Are the women still pretty and stylishly dressed? That's a nicely tailored suit you are wearing. What are the popular pieces playing in the Paris theaters today?"

The ex-crown prince is in the very best of health and doesn't seem to suffer much from his exile. He complains about the high cost of living, like any other citizen, but seems to enjoy life in a simple little house, with a cook, a valet, one other domestic and a former Brandenburg gendarme. Though at Doorn the inhabitants are almost hostile to the ex-Kaiser, the former crown prince enjoys such popularity here that the municipality would bestow high honors upon him if the Dutch government would permit it.

CALOMEL LOSING OUT IN SOUTH

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Responsible for Change for the Better.

Every druggist in town has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it," Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle doesn't cost very much but if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, just ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day.

WHO'S WHO AT WASHINGTON?

Etiquette Fiends Are Worried About Rank of the Notables.

By DAVID M. CHURCH, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, June 24.—With the White House again the social center of Washington, there has broken out anew the ancient war over the question of "Who's Who in the National Capital."

Students of etiquette, social leaders and social climbers, diplomats and statesmen are all engaged in disputing the question over tea-cups and cocktail glasses (yes, there are still a few in use in the capital).

The President, of course, ranks every one in Washington, even the first lady of the land. Official etiquette demands that the President go first everywhere, and if you see a photograph of the President preceding the first lady of the land as they leave church or enter it, don't think the Chief Executive disdains the honor to do it, for official etiquette demands it, chivalry or not. Perhaps this may be a matter to be taken up by the feminists.

The Vice-President ranks next to the President. So far it is very easy. But now comes the moot question. Who ranks next to the Vice-President?

Recently on a White House dinner given by the Speaker of the House was ranked just beneath the Vice-President. Immediately consternation resulted. State Department etiquette sharks took the matter up with the White House. The matter was formally discussed. A lengthy discussion followed and precedents were searched in the Congressional Library. The state department sharps were victorious. When they were asked to serve the Secretary of State sat next to the Vice-President.

This victory caused a small sensation and led to some protest from members of the United States Senate who declared that had they been present at the dinner they would certainly have felt entitled to sit above any cabinet member, for they argue that the senator makes approval that a cabinet officer gets his position, and precedents.

Then along come the members of Congress, who declare that they are on a social par with the members of the cabinet, and don't they represent the people just as much as the Senators?

No one has really determined just where the justices of the United States Supreme Court fit in this scheme of rank.

General John J. Pershing offers another problem to those who have the duty of seeing that all social prerogatives are preserved and that no feelings are injured.

Certainly there will be a social sensation if the President, the Vice-President, members of the Cabinet and both branches of congress, the diplomatic corps and the general staff of the United States ever sit down to dinner together, for nobody knows yet just "Who's Who in the National Capital."

LEGION HAS SLACKER PUT BACK IN PRISON

Little Rock, Ark., June 24.—"Uncle Tom" Adkisson, 62, illiterate rang-leader of Arkansas' draft resisters, has been returned to the State prison here to complete a two-and-a-half-year term for manslaughter. Governor McRae returned the "aged" mountaineer to good behavior, but following protestations of former service men and citizens, the governor cancelled the parole.

Adkisson was the leader of a determined band of mountaineers who staged a ten-day battle in the hills near Hober Springs in July, 1918, when Federal authorities began a round-up of this State's 30,000 alleged draft evaders.

Hardy Adkisson, 25, and Bliss Adkisson, 26, sons of the old man, were within the draft age. The registration board denied them exemption on the ground that they had working support for the reason that all of the Adkissons resided together.

Barriacting themselves in their home the Adkisson clan, assisted by other local draft resisters, defied the government. Two companies of machine gunners from Little Rock surrounded the home in the hills and after a ten-day battle the draft resisters were captured at Fort Hazelwood, a deputy sheriff, was shot to death by the Adkisson clan.

BONDS OF STATE

of the bonds runs from ten to forty years, and the Legislature did not believe, when it was here last winter, that the price of bonds would continue as high as they are at present time for very many years. In fact it was then thought that possibly the bond market would get back somewhat near normal before the council of State would have to secure the money needed for the road and institutional work that time.

It will be better, in the opinion of financiers, to borrow money on short term notes even at six per cent than to authorize an increase in the interest rate of the bonds. For the bond interest rate is increased to six per cent the increased interest will have to be paid during the life of the bonds. Under the short term note system it is possible to get money as it is needed and retain it until the bonds can be sold with which to retire these notes.

The extra session might be inclined to delve into the financial program of the State, but the majority of the leaders who have been to Raleigh recently are inclined to think it better to handle only the municipal finance act, if a special session is called.

THE RAILROAD VALUES

The department of revenue which this week heard the petitions of the six large railroads in the state asking for a reduction in the value of their property, announced that decision would be reached on these petitions as early as possible.

The department does not want to certify these values to the county authorities for tax computing purposes until the first of September, so there is really no great rush about arriving at a decision. Col. A. D. Watts, however, wants to get the values of the way as early as possible, and thought it possible that the decision could be arrived at before September, possibly thirty days before that time.

The railroads are contending that the value of their property in North Carolina has materially decreased from the 1919 values. This decrease is the result, partly of a natural depreciation when little if any additional improvements were made, and to the decline in the value of all other property. The physical property of all corporations was valued very high in 1919, when the railroads were at the peak of their earnings. The railroad property was naturally placed on a high value along with the property of other corporations.

But conditions are different this year, even from what they were a year ago, and considerably different from what they were in 1919.

CITIZENS TRAINING CAMP

Major B. F. Ristine, instruction officer of the United States Army, assigned to North Carolina, is calling attention to the citizens military training camp for the youths of the fourth corps area, which will open at Camp Jackson on July 18 and run for one month. Young men of North Carolina and other states in the fourth corps area, which comprises this State, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Tennessee and Louisiana. Headquarters of the area are at Fort McPherson, Georgia.

The citizens training camp will accommodate a thousand young men for one month. The training will be similar to that provided for the civilian population at Plattsburg before the war. It will give the men the rudimentary knowledge of the army, and will be a great benefit to those who attend, not only from the standpoint of being a healthful recreation, but will provide interesting instruction in military work.

Any young man in this State who is interested in going to this summer camp may get complete and detailed information from Major Ristine, at Raleigh.
