New York, June 28 .- The star boxers of other nations who have invaded the United States since the ring game began in the hope of winning fame, fortune and a title have been Few of these landed titles but many of them won fame and a fair sized fortune-as ring fortunes were reckoned in their days.

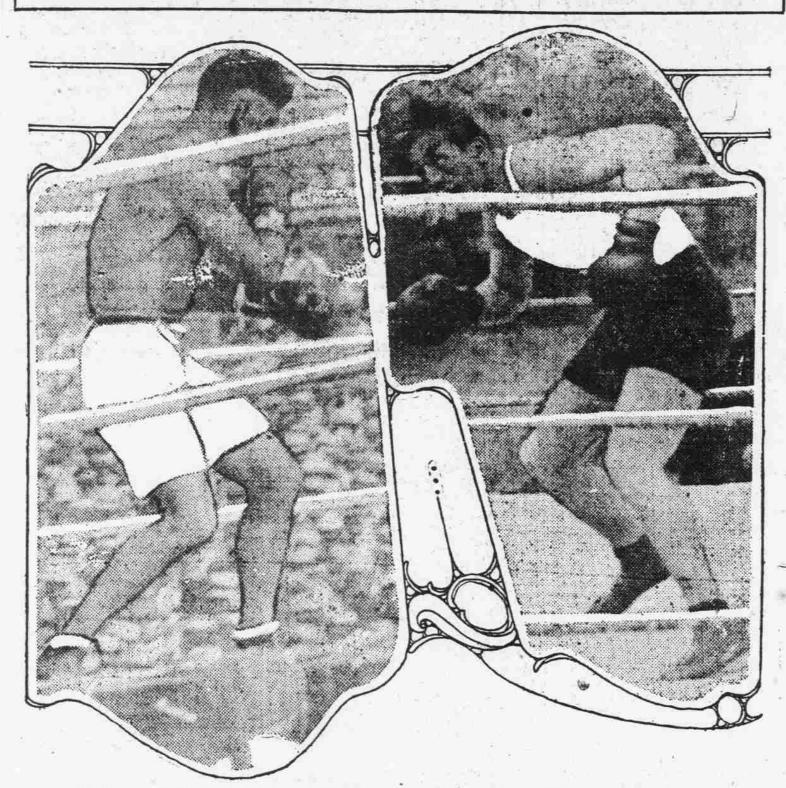

A majority of the foreign fistic luminaries came from Great Britain. These stars ranged from the diminutive Jimmy Wilde, the last invader from the British Isles, to heavyweights, including Jem Mace and Charley Mitchell. Mitchell it was who fought John L. Sullivan in Madison Square Garden, New York, and later was knocked out by Gentleman Jim Corbett in a couple Besides these men there were Freddie Welsh, Matt Wells, Bombardier Wells, Jim Driscoll and others. Bob Fitzsimmons undoubtedly was the greatest fighter that ever decided the greatest fighter that ever decided to take the U. S. by storm. And Bob did that. Coming from Australia he won his way into the hearts of ring fans and fought his way to the heavy-weight title. His popularity remained undiminished after he lost the title. Peter Jackson, although a negro, made friends when he came to fight leffries riends when he came to fight Jeffries. He was a skilful sportsmanlike fighter, Young Griffo was another foreign fighter to win fame and friends here. Besides these men there were Frank Siavin, Dan Creedon, Bill Squires and sev-

Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier, who will clash for the world's heavyweight championship Joly 2, have little in common, but they are alike in one respect at least. Both assume a low crouch much of the time and get in their deadliest work from that position. Dempsey, crouched, begins boring in on his opponent and lays the foundation for his k. o. by throwing pile-driver blows into his enemy's middle and over his heart. Then Dempsey uses and drives a terrific left to the face. Carpentier leaps from Lis crouch to plant a knockout left to the

Ring Battles Jack And Georges

Jack Dempsey knocked out Bill Brennan in the 12th round of their bout at Madison Square Garden, December 14, 1920, in his most recent contest, The champion's showing that night against Brennan, a good second-rate boxer, was far from reassuring. The champion appeared to have suffered from the long lack of action. He was much slower than in previous bouts. Brennan hit him and appeared to hurt him and Dempsey left the ring after the fight bleeding from an injured ear.

The bout, however, was slow through most of the rounds. Motion pictures were made and many believe that there in lay the reason for Brennan's unexpectedly good showing. Dempsey throughout, failed to show his usual aggressiveness. Brennan apparently had no fear of the champion, and took the initiatve in several of the rounds, often standing toe to toe with Dempsey slugging. However, Dempsey managed to wear down the challenger in the later rounds and in the 12th, a left to the body and a right to the head sent Brennan to the convas in a neutral corner. It was the only knockdown of the unsatisfactory bout.

The early months of 1914, the close of which was destined to see Carpentier a soldier in a real fight, brought the Frenchman his first defeat since he had lost to Billy Papke in 1912. Joe Jeannette, the American negro heavyweight and one of the game's the Frenchman in a slashing 15-round Williams56 206 31 66 89 0 bout. Many spectators thought that Kennedy Carpentier should have been awarded the decision. In spite of that, Carpentier's hitting power shown in that battle convinced Americans that here was a real topnotch heavyweight. Twice, he sent Jeannette to the canvas with crashing blows to the head. Jeannette has since declared that the blow with which Carpentier floored him early in the bout was the hardest that ever connected with his anatomy. The veteran negro, who has done little fighting for several years, is now a resident of Hoboken, N. J. He has done considerable work with Carpentier while the Frenchman has been training at Manhasset. One afternoon recently Carpentied, while sparring with the negro, unleashed his right with its full power and once again Jeannette hit the canvas, stunned but not knock-

"Can that boy hit?" was Jeannette's question as he slowly rose to his feet, while Carpentier apologized. "Ah'll say he can hit. What that right lands on must go down. And that includes Mistah Dempsey."

Champ At The Top Of His Form

LATE FIGHT DOPE

Carpentier Working Secretly

DEMPSEY

Atlantic City, N. J., June 28 .- Jack Dempsey today is within 48 hours from the end of his training grind. The champion is scheduled to do his last boxing in public this afternoon and to-After the secret workout with the heavyweights yesterday Dempsey probably will box with the lighter men in camp in the two final sessions with the gloves. The champion and his handlers had no explanation to offer today for the secret workout late yesterday afternoon, when he toiled for 55 minutes at top speed with no spectators watching him. Dempsey worked out in the stuffy old hangar a quarter of a mile back of his camp after announcement was made that he would take a day "Jack simply felt he wanted to work and he decided to do it on a minute s notice," said Teddy Hayes, trainer of Perhaps the reason the titleholder decided to work in secret was to satisfy himself that he had not gone stale or slowed up in his boxing or footwork. Some noted trainers and athletes have been rather strong in their criticism that they believed Dempsey was too finely drawn, that he had overtrained and was on the verge of going stale. But the champion, in his workout yesterday, satisfied those privileged to watch that he is at the top of his form and in no danger of going stale.

Dempsey had not finished driving powerful rights and lefts into the heavy felt stuffed bag before he broke out into profuse perspiration. He started his practice with three rounds of punching the light bag and then he waded into the heavy swinging target. He worked for nearly an hour with only intervals of 30 seconds between three-minute rounds, going two each with Eddie O'Hare and Larry Wil-The champion set a furious pace from the start. He battered Williams with less consideration than the veteran sparring mate desired. Several of his blows to the body forced Williams to grunt with pain and retreat.
