

MAGYAR CHIEF EXPECTS HELP

Gloom Oppresses Him But He Has Dreams of Future Greatness of Hungary.

Budapest, June 30.—"I worked for Hungary's prosperity during my half-century political career. I suffered with my people when the war and the catastrophe crushed us and now I desire to see the nation rising nobly to its feet," said Count Albert Apponyi to the Associated Press correspondent in the city, over the telephone from his quarters in the Danube city, bathed in the golden rays of the setting sun.

Count Apponyi recently celebrated his 75th birthday and the special session of the National Assembly, the gala event of the summer house, the performance of the opera which were held in honor of the "grand old man" gave expression to the esteem in which he is held by the Magyars.

"You ask me to look backward and to my experiences of the last 50 years," said Count Apponyi, stroking his long patriarchal beard. "Well, look back and you will find the Danube valley and the city—when 50 years ago I was a young man, I saw a young nation rising from the ruins of a once great empire and one solitary bridge over a river which an Englishman called the 'British-made material'."

Now look. Six new bridges—home-made to the last nail—are thrown across the river with the traffic of steamships. You see the dark outlines of the Gothic parliament and the long rows of noble mansions, you hear the rustling of the national flag, the bustle of a million inhabitants. Here is the history of the last century which can boast of a marvellous economic, technical, cultural progress of almost American proportions.

But alas, my pleasant recollections are obscured by the traffic of steamships. The bulk of the nation, the general and landed middle-class could not keep abreast of the feverish economic progress and consequently fell back to the traditions of a long and gloomy past, they neglected trade and commerce and were ill-fitted for the exigencies of modern public and intellectual life. Their footing thus became unsteady and was occupied by the expansion of their industry, for which they can hardly be blamed.

Our gigantic struggle during the last decades has set another dark side to the picture but lately aware of social progress, more production and consumption, but much more a just distribution of goods produced and that a social legislation has to keep watch and eliminate the bad consequences of free competition as well as check the tyranny of the rich. I, at least, have been preaching and advocating for 30 years a liberal labor policy and the satisfaction of all labor claims which are compatible with efficient production.

CLIFF INDIANS ONCE NOMADIC

Important Scientific Discovery Announced—Civilized Moving Westward.

Canyon, Texas, June 30.—That the Pueblo Cliff Dwellers of New Mexico were originally buffalo hunting and nomadic Indians of Western Oklahoma and northwestern Texas and that they gradually developed their architecture and their arts as they moved westward, finally settling down to permanent habitations in New Mexico, has been definitely established by archeological investigations made in Texas Panhandle and Eastern New Mexico by Warren K. Moorehead, geologist of Andover, Massachusetts, and J. B. Thorburn, representing the Oklahoma Historical Society.

This is an announcement important to science, as formerly it was generally supposed that the Cliff-Dwellers came northward from Mexico.

The explorations of Mr. Moorehead and Mr. Thorburn carried them along the course of the Canadian and Cimarron Rivers in the Panhandle of Texas and thence eastward into New Mexico as far as the Mora Valley. In Mora Valley eight or ten typical Pueblo ruins were found in a fairly good state of preservation. From the Mora Valley eastward to the Oklahoma line the stone buildings of the Indians become smaller, more primitive and less important until they finally disappear.

Upon completion of the work done preparatory to this announcement, Messrs. Moorehead and Thorburn delivered addresses on the subject before the West Texas Normal School at Canyon. It was here that the first definite announcement of this important discovery was made.

This was the second archeological exploration trip Mr. Moorehead has made to this part of the country in connection with the tracing of the origin of the Cliff Dweller culture.

BRITISH CAPTURE SIXTY PRISONERS

Turks and Bolsheviki Are Said to be Contemplating a Vast Uprising.

Constantinople, June 30.—(By the Associated Press.)—Turks and Bolsheviki are reported to contemplate a vast uprising in this city, which would be accomplished by the destruction of public buildings.

Early yesterday morning allied troops, acting under orders from General Harrington, commander of British forces in Constantinople, marched through the principal streets of the city and raided hotels in search of Bolsheviki. British soldiers, with fixed bayonets, entered a building occupied by a Bolsheviki organization and seized large quantities of arms. Several men alleged to be the principal ringleaders in the reported uprising were arrested.

More than sixty prisoners were placed in military lorries by the British, who also raided the offices of the Bolsheviki trade delegation and arrested an assistant of Bronislav Koudish, Soviet commercial delegate here, and other members of the Bolsheviki mission. It was announced in British official circles that this raid was carried out because the presence of Bolsheviki in Constantinople menaced the security of Allied troops here. It was asserted that the plot for an uprising had been frustrated through the vigilance of the police.

Greek forces have withdrawn from Ismid, 55 miles southeast of this city, and the Turkish nationalists are believed to have a clear road to Constantinople. Reports are silent, however, relative to any advance in this direction. In the vicinity of Ushak further south, a Greek division is said to have suffered severely in a fight with the Turks.

TWO MEN ARE KILLED IN MEXICAN FIGHTING

Mexico City, June 30.—Two men were killed and several wounded in a clash yesterday between farmers and radicals at Puebla, State of Queretaro, following an alleged violation by radicals of the church in that village.

A demonstration had been organized by radicals and, while parading, they entered the Catholic church and are said to have overturned a statue of the Virgin and committed other acts of vandalism. The farmers of the neighborhood armed themselves and violent fighting ensued. The disorders continued until Federal troops from Queretaro, the state capital, intervened.

PROFESSIONAL MEN ARE TAX DELINQUENTS

Doctors and other professional men who are liable for a county privilege tax were among the list on file at the sheriff's Thursday morning as about to be delinquent in paying the tax. Thursday was the last day on which the licenses can be secured before the state imposes a penalty for failure to obtain license.

Others liable for the tax are operators of pool rooms, owners of automobiles, dealers in cigars and tobaccos and many others.

Sheriff Cochran said he and his office force had as far as possible sent word to many who are liable for the tax, but that it was impossible to remind everyone, and that he expected the day would pass with many delinquents on the list.

The sheriff has no option in imposing or not imposing the penalty for failure to pay the tax. The state fixes the amount of the tax and also the time limit and specifically provides that those who fail to obtain the tax by July 1 are subject to the full tax and a penalty.
