THE CHARLOTTE NEWS, CHARLOTTE, N. C., TUESDAY AFTERNOON, SEPTEMBER 6, 1921.

Now, if you ever packed your lunch and went away to the woods, or the Lake, or the River, for a whole day you know how Tinker Bob and Silky, the Monkey, and Major Por Cat felt when they started for the Lake in the Magis Basket

"I'm just going to take a chance at fishing myself," said the silly Monkey to the King as they were off. The silly fellow! What could a Monkey know about fishing? But he thought he knew all about it.

"You couldn't fish if you had a silver hook and a golden pole," said Major Pole Cat. Major was a pretty good judge of fishermen, too.

"Well, I'll try it a bit anyway and I can catch them if they are in the For water and I can see them. haven't seen anything yet that I couldn't outrun especially in this for-

This made Major Pole Cat laugh. Outrun a fish, the idea! Who ever heard of a fish running? "I see very clearly, Mr. Monkey, that you know very little about a fish, but when the day is over you will know more. Ho! Ha!

who ever heard of a fish running in the water!'

They were not long on the way for ed very swiftly, and had it not been that about a third larger than Red Wing, the edge of the basket being high the wind would have blown the King's hat

Tinker Bob knew that the early morning was the time to fish and he was fore any of the fishermen arrived. He ker Bob, "and we'll go right over and anxious to be at the fishing ground bewas there, too, in plenty of time, not a fisherman about. But the fish were having a fine time playing tag. that extended out into the lake. "That's the first fisherman to arrive," said Tinsee him before another comes."

"Well, who in the world was it any way?" asked Silsy, for his curiosity was very great.

"Why, don't you know him? That's Kingfisher, he's a regular old rattle box. Come on, let's hurry or he may go on.' What do you suppose they found?

If The Lights Should Go Out

When you think the rate seems high or the service poor, consider for a moment what this town would be like if all electrical current were turned off.

The stores, the houses and the churches would go dark. There'd be no lights on the corners, no elevators in the buildings, no street cars, no telephones -not even a movie show.

Kerosene lamps would come back into use, and your wife would bend over a wash tub and sweep with a broom.

Electric current is one of the cheapest necessities you can buy today. In proportion to the comfort and convenience it gives, electricity is worth many times what you pay for it. And it helps, in a large way, to make our town a prosperous and desirable place in which to live.
