Spartans Take Easy Game From The Departed Hornets

Listless Game Witnessed by Smallest Crowd of Year Taken by Mike Kelly's Klan Who Hit Higgins at Will While Locals Were Helpless.

The thoroughly faltering Hornets allowed the Spartans to take them to ride again Tuesday afternoon and bury them almost hopelessly in the cellar by a 11-3 victory in a game witnessed by the smallest crowd of the season, but large enough in view of the sort of baseball they have been dispensing out there this week. The main reason that the visitors won was because they hit Mush Higgins to all departments of the lot and fielded excellently. The main reason the Bees lost was because they couldn't hit Koenigsmark at all and played another miserable game afield, six errors being chalked up against them, and four of those being assigned Acting Manager O'Connell.

It is not difficult to believe, in the light of the sort of performances of which the Bees have been guilty for the past few days, that Manager McKiff will not return at all to finish the season in the role of mentor. There have been a few under suspicion that the outfit got beyond anything that McKiff could endure and that he will take advantage of this trip to his home in Huntington, W. Va., to see his father, to remain as far away from his underlings as possible until they become scattered to the four winds the latter part of this month.

CHOWD HAS ENOUGH
The slim crowd that witnessed the rotten exhibition of inefficiency and sleepiness yesterday indicated that it had about enough also. It appears to be the determination of the Hornets to make sure of quitting the season where they have always belonged—in the cellar—and rather than take any chances of defeating their ambitious opponents along this line, they are out there making faces of ball games. And the patronage has all of that it can stand. It is getting a taste in its mouth that is going to be hard to eradicate of disfavor and disgust which does not augur well for future baseball in this community.

The visitors did some hectic hitting. They counted 14 safe blows for an aggregate of 21 bases, mixing doubles and triples with a penitence of singles. Koenigsmark was one of the star batsmen of the afternoon with a single, double and triple. Sikes rapped out three singles; Bob Polmar hit safely for a single and a triple; Braun, who has been hitting at a terrific pace since coming to the local lot, crowned Higgins offering for a double and a single and Achingner took a triple unto himself.

BRILLIANT CATCH
The fielding novelty of the day was furnished by young Sikes, the fleet left fielder of the Spartans who duplicated a marvelous catch of the preceding day when he raced toward the center of the lot and with one hand, on a dead run, speared a liner from the bat of Brilbeck.

The fielding events were few, this being about the only outstanding performance of the struggle. The Hornets played without life, only an occasional spark of their former selves coming into evidence. The Spartans started scoring in the first inning when the first three men to face Higgins hit safely and three runs were scored. Three more came in the next inning when two errors put men on the paths and Koenigsmark cleaned things up with a triple. Sykes singled the first basemen home and the Kelly Klan was six runs to the good and only two innings gone.

They added another in the third and then in the sixth they put a quartette across, their run-getting stopping at this point. The Hornets made one run in the seventh and in the ninth Kennedy walked, Perry beat out a hit and both scored on a triple by Higgins.

"BUCK" WHARTON WILL QUIT PENN

Veteran Line Coach Through as a Supervisor of Football at Penn.

Philadelphia Sept. 7.—Dr. Charles ("Buck") Wharton, veteran line coach of the University of Pennsylvania's football squad, is "through" as a supervisor of football at Penn. Dr. Wharton, who hasn't missed a year on Penn's coaching staff since 1898, except when serving as major in the medical corps during the World War, has given up his football work at the university in order to give more attention to his school and professional duties.

It has been thought several times during his years of coaching that the squad could get along without Wharton, and he was not placed on the staff, but shortly after the season got under way, an S. O. S. was sent out for it always became apparent that his place as line coach could not be easily filled.

"Buck," as he always will be known to his football pupils, was a member of the "old school" when Penn's name stood at the head of the list in college football. He was Penn's star guard under way, an S. O. S. was sent out for it always became apparent that his place as line coach could not be easily filled.

In 1898, when Wharton began coaching for Penn, he invented the famous line system of play, an entirely new style of play in those days, which has been modified and revised to fit the requirements of the present-day game. The fundamental principles of this style are still the same. Among well-known players Wharton has developed are: Lud Wray, Pat Dreyer and Ernie Scarlet, centers; Lew Little, Neil Matthews, Johnny Tizzi and Bill Ward, tackles; Bob Lamberton, Carl Thomas, Erstavag and Heimling, guards; and Heine Miller, Izzy Levine and Hunter Scarlet, ends. Penn is at least going to start the season without the help of "Buck" Wharton, but there is much speculation in football circles as to whether it won't turn out as it has several times before.

Wharton, who admits having seen 50 summers, looks to be in good enough condition to go on the gridiron today, but his most strenuous physical exertions will be confined to his daily exercise and supervising physical education at Penn.
