Beautiful Porch Party in Honor of Miss Chambers.

A charming affair of the morning was the porch party which Mrs. Arthur Lillington Smith gave, complimenting Miss Anne Dewey Chambers, whose marriage to Edward Yates Kester in October is to be one of the most brilliant events of the year.

Mrs. Smith's home is one of the beautiful old homes of the city. Its ante-bellum spaciousness only equalled by its wealth of elegant old furnishings which represent a generation of people who were leaders in the highest social life of Eastern and Western North Carolina. Immense porches extend on all sides of the house, making an ideal setting for a porch party of such charm as Mrs. Smith was hostess of Thursday morning.

A wealth of fall blooms, defining a color note of yellow and red, filled gorgeous baskets, vases and hanging baskets on the porch where the pretty courtesy to the bride-elect was so beautifully extended. The bride-elect was so beautifully extended. The bride-elect was so beautifully extended.

Master Knebel a Musical Wonder.

Mrs. Lily Rozelle Knebel, and young son, Herman Rozelle, of Salisbury, have returned home after spending several days in the city. Master Knebel came to Trinity Methodist church last Sunday. She is one of the most beautiful voices in the State and her son also is wonderfully gifted. He is not over ten years of age and sings first or second in duets with his mother, with marvelous effect. He also plays several instruments with skill that is remarkable. He assists his mother in concerts.

To Visit at Col. Craig's.

Miss Marguerite Crittenden, of Greenville, Miss., who is the charming guest of Mrs. E. W. Mellon, will go to Gastonia next week to visit Col. and Mrs. Thomas L. Craig. She will probably spend a week with the Craigs, then return to Charlotte. A charming hospitality planned for Saturday for Miss Crittenden is a luncheon which Mrs. Hugh Montgomery will give at the Charlotte Country club.

Bride Party for Visitor.

Complimenting Mrs. T. J. Wright, of Norfolk, Va., who is a popular visitor of the month, Mrs. Landon C. Young entertained at three tables of bridge Wednesday at her home on Kingston avenue. The house was prettily set with dahlias—reds and yellows—with fernery as a background. The highest score was made by Mrs. Harry Wakefield, she received a handsome prize. The guest of honor was presented with a dainty souvenir. Following the game Mrs. Young served fruit salad with elaborate accessories, and ice cream and cake.

Mrs. Wright is charmingly remembered here as Miss Ruth Porter of Charlotte.

CYPRESS TRUNK IS RARE EXHIBITION

One of the most unique Made-in-Carolina exhibits brought to the Exposition arrived this morning and will be placed on view at the Exposition grounds during the day. It is a long-straight cypress tree trunk, grown in the eastern part of the State, not far from Maxton. It was donated to the Exposition by E. P. Williams, head of the E. P. Williams Company, dealers in lumber, shingles, cross ties and other timbers, of Maxton.

Mr. Williams had the tree cut and shipped here at his own expense and offered it to the Exposition company through Col. T. L. Kirkpatrick, president of the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Williams specified it should be put on exhibition at the Exposition as a North Carolina product or used as a flagpole at the Exposition grounds and that it should afterward be used as a flagpole on some of the city school grounds.

The cypress specimen is 68 feet in length and averages about 26 inches in diameter. It is a singularly splendid specimen of the taxodium umbriatum, as the botanists call the hard cypress tree that flourishes plentifully in the eastern part of the State.

BEAUTY CHATS

We are getting along toward the days now when people are coming back from vacations and appearing at city desks and counters with peeling noses and a deep scarlet V which just doesn't quite match the line made by the opening of the shirt waist. It is very pleasant to see so much sunburn because it is reminder of good times and rest and fresh air. But it isn't quite so pleasant for the poor girl who finds that sunburn and her new Autumn frocks do not go together.

CUCUMBER FACE BLEACH.

Oil of sweet almonds . . . 4 ounces
Fresh cucumber juice . . . 13 ounces
White castile soap (powder) . . . 1 ounce
Tincture of benzoin . . . 2.3 drachm

The cucumber juice is made by taking fresh cucumbers, slicing them thin, cooking them slowly in a very little water, and then straining. Shake this with the soap in a large jar, then add the oil and the benzoin and stir and beat until the liquid is creamy. Keep this in tightly corked bottles in the dark and shake up before using.

Rub this into the skin and let it dry. It is best used at night before going to bed, but can be used any time during the day after you have washed the face with warm water and soap.

If you wish this to be rather more of an astringent use a whole drachm of the tincture of Benzoin instead of two-thirds.

Mrs. H. B.—You are overtaxing your digestion with so much sugar and that

COLONEL PRATT IS NO COMPOSER

Printer's Error Keeps Him Busy Shoeing Away Congratulations.

Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, head of the North Carolina Geological and Economic Bureau and authority on everything connected with the State of North Carolina, was busy Wednesday night and Thursday disclaiming honors which have been thrust upon him in connection with the Made-in-Carolina Exposition, which he is here to attend. He came to superintend and manage a booth setting forth the State's riches in a geologic way but has acquired honors that he did not anticipate.

Last night, when the several thousand patrons of the Exposition picked up the musical program of the evening and went to listen to the New York City concert, the Metropolitan Quartet and Miss Marie Currier, they observed that one of the musical compositions, "The Cavalry Charge," was credited to Joseph Hyde Pratt.

IS NO COMPOSER

Col. Pratt, being modest, disclaims the honor of being a composer and is busy explaining to his friends here that there is some mistake about that program. He admits knowing something about the geologic resources of North Carolina, but engineering other things. He even admits that no one likes music more than he, but he says, as for composing, he has no hope of ever attaining fame in that field. He was a full-fledged colonel of engineers in France, wearing an eagle on his shoulder, and will admit that he may modestly claim to have done a soldier's duty as commander of one of the engineering regiments of the Third division, but he would like it understood that he does not claim to be a musical composer.

"The honor of composing 'The Cavalry Charge,' which the New York City Concert Band played so splendidly at the Exposition is not my work," Colonel Pratt explained to enquiring friends, and I guess there is some mistake about the program. Although, I am not an authority on musical matters, I understand that 'The Cavalry Charge' was composed by Mr. Gustave Luders, a very celebrated composer of music.

FRINTER DID IT

Col. Pratt examined the printed program again to make sure that he had read it right the first time. There it was.

DEMAND GUARANTEES FROM THE HAPSBURGS

Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 15.—By the Associated Press.—The Spanish Government is demanding political and financial guarantees before permitting former Emperor Charles of Austria to take up a residence in Spain, as he has twice petitioned the Madrid Government to be allowed to do so.

Spain especially demands restrictions on the household expenses of the emperor, which are estimated to amount annually to 1,200,000 Swiss francs. This expenditure is paid by his large suite of eighty persons, which the Spanish Government desires reduced considerably.
