

"Tinker Bob" Stories

by Carlisle H. Holcomb

THE GREAT ENEMY.

Tinker Bob and Major Pole Cat and Jack, the Rabbit, looked at the children of Long Neck, the Great Blue Heron for a long time. Mrs. Heron was feeding them fish. She would tear it apart in small pieces and they would open their mouths all at the same time. And if you want to see a pile of fish bones picked as clean as they can you want to look about the nest of Long Neck. They never feed the bones to their children but they don't miss a piece of fish.

"Well, O King, as I was about to say I had something to tell you that was very important. I have always had trouble in teaching my children to fish. I don't have trouble in getting them to do as I do but I have trouble in keeping them from harm while they are learning the art of making a living for themselves."

"Who in the world would do you any harm or your children?" asked Tinker Bob in surprise for this is the first time he had heard that Long Neck had an enemy in the world.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

BY ROY K. MOULTON

LIFE.
Life to the barber's head of hair:
To the toothbrush, a pair of shoes;
To the youth of sixteen, a flapping young queen;
To the rummy, a shot of booze.

To the girl in the show (you all know this I know)
It's a mad whirl of joy-riding dizziness;
To the gambler it's luck, to the fighter it's pluck,
And to me—well, that's none of your business.

It's Value is Increased by Demands for Economy.

You can now have real comfort and ease in cooking without mess and fuss of ashes and dust of coal and wood piles and carrying. Install the right oil cook stove.

The other day we printed a rhymed advertisement from a New Jersey paper offering a Ford for sale. The purchaser, on trying out the flivver, leaped into print with this effusion: I bought that Ford with its piston rings, its rear wheels and one front spring. Believe me, boys, it's just the thing. And if it praises you hear me sing, Carburetor busted, with two slight blows I made a little dent, and the old thing goes. Radiator's fixed with a piece of gum. We'll now say that it's on the bum? Differential greased, removed the squeak.

"Is it to be a dry banquet?"
"Absolutely."
"My remarks will be very few."

A WIFE IN THE MAKING

BY PHYLLIS PHILLIPS

THE TELL-TALE CAR.
Mr. Hamlin hallooed to Cherry when he was ready to start, and with a last promise to Beth to see her that evening without fail, Cherry skipped down to the waiting car. The old merchant seemed intensely proud of having such a pretty and capable person as chauffeur, and kept chuckling to himself happily as he watched Cherry manipulate the wheel as easily as she did her chapeaux and lady customers. They thundered out into the country and soon came to their destination. Here Cherry had a chance to rest and explore the most beautiful rose garden she had ever seen. Tea and cakes were served by Mr. Trevalyan, himself, in the garden, and after that Mr. Hamlin sat and finished his business with that gentleman until five o'clock sounded from a silver-tongued clock within the house.

TODAY'S RECIPES
Green Corn Griddle Cakes—Mix together one cupful of raw corn pulp, one egg beaten light, half a teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoon of oil, one tablespoon of melted shortening, one cupful of milk and sufficient flour, sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, to make a pancake batter, fry as for ordinary griddle cakes.
Corn Chowder—Cut two slices of salt pork, fry out, remove the pork and in the fat cook a diced onion until tender but not browned. Add four cupfuls of sliced potatoes, two cupfuls of water, one teaspoonful of salt and a quarter of a teaspoonful of paprika. Five minutes before the potatoes are done add two cupfuls of scraped corn pulp and four cupfuls of milk. Simmer for five or six minutes longer and thicken with a little flour mixed with cold water. Stir constantly until the chowder thickens and stir in six broken soda crackers.
Salads of Eggs—Now that eggs are plentiful egg salad forms one of the best of the substantial luncheon salads. One good one is made of hard boiled eggs. Remember to cook the eggs just below the boiling point for half an hour to have them digestible—cut in half and laid on slices of tomato on lettuce leaves. Around each slice of tomato and half of eggs lay a ring of sweet green pepper, made simply by washing and slicing the pepper.

WASHING MACHINE HINTS
Don't fail to have some reliable agent of the sort of washing machine you buy demonstrate it and explain how to use it. Ask for a pamphlet or booklet of directions for your sort of washing machine and then read this thoroughly. Never fall to oil the washing machine exactly as required. Do not labor under the delusion that more oil than the directions call for is just that much better. Too much oil is sometimes as bad as too little. Use a good quality of machine oil, the quality which you know to be of standard grade. Never fail to empty the washer of water soon as you are through using it. Take the pains always to rinse it out by pouring in a pailful of hot water after the used water has run out. Do not fail to look at your washing machine every day or so even when not using, making sure that it is in good condition. Sometimes if clogged with a little moisture within it becomes slightly moldy. When this occurs you should remove the parts that can be removed at once, wash them thoroughly dry the entire machine carefully. Leave windows near by open, and do not cover again until thoroughly dry within.

An Invitation

Visitors to the exposition are invited while at the building to avail themselves of the facilities in our booth for rest and recreation. There are comfortable seats and settees, and a number of electric fans serve to make it comfortable even during the warmest part of the day.

Electricity has been a tremendous factor in the industrial development of the Carolinas and in making possible such a highly creditable and extensive exposition as is now under way. When visiting our booth you will be interested in studying the various maps and data presented there. Some of the facts will surprise you.

Attendants at the booth will be pleased to demonstrate and take orders for the electrical appliances which are on display.
The attention of visitors is also called to the street railway service to and from the exposition grounds. All Hoskins cars make connection at Clarkston street with the transfer cars to the exposition building. Beginning at 1:30 each day a special exposition car will be operated between Independence Square and the transfer points, giving during the afternoon and evening a ten-minute schedule from the city to the exposition. On special occasions extra service will be furnished.
