Mrs. Warren Higley, who died in New York Saturday, was one of the most popular women in Sorosis, and was familiarly known in that association as "Fallestrand," a name won by her brilliant conversational powers and her intellectual attainments. Mrs. Higley was born in Washington, D. C. Her maiden name was Emma W. Clark. She was married in 1873, in Ohio, to Warren Higley, now a lawyer in New York. In 1878 she went abroad and made a study of art from 1880 to 1884 she was extremely active in aiding the establishment of the Woman's Hospital in Cincinnati, working with Mrs. M. Wilson. Of this she was for a time vice president. Mrs. Higley had a marked taste for the study of medicine and took one year at the Homeopathic Women's College and was graduated three years ago from the Electric College.

An old lady living at Lewisburg, Oregon, picked up an Indian arrow head that is quite a relic. It is black flint interspersed with quartz, pearl and emerald, and under the microscope exhibits a roseate hue of exquisite beauty. The Malala Indians forty years ago told the whites of a rock south of Mount Hood in the mountains that shone with such intense brightness as to excite superstition in the savage breast to such an extent that they feared to approach the sparkling luminary. There is not much credulity to be attached to Indian tradition, but if the stone from which this arrow head was extracted could be located gems of great value might be found.

A Georgia editor has an old Confederate shoe, manufactured for the Government in 1864, just before the war ended. The sole is fully three-quarters of an inch thick, and is made of poplar wood, evidently shaped with a hatchet or drawing knife. The upper is attached to the sole with a strip of rawhide, running entirely around the shoe, the leather being held to the sole with large carpet tacks. The upper is of rough cowhide, dressed only on the inside.

Current Events and Incidents in North Carolina.

Greensboro Patriot: A bar keeper at Danbury had a fight last week and Judge Merrimon gave him his choice between going to jail or closing up his bar room and giving a bond of $300 never to sell any more liquor at that place. He gave the bond and closed up, much to the grief of the horse traders.

Asheville Citizen: Messrs E. F. Kizer and W. J. Cobb of Monroeton, Pa., who have been spending several days prospecting in Western North Carolina, have returned to their home. They will return in a few weeks with a view of investing, and will perhaps move their chair manufacturing here. They are well pleased with the fine timbers as well as the climate and scenery.

Wilmington Review: Mr. Thomas J. Armstrong, Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of the Third Congressional District, has issued a call for a meeting of that committee, to be held at Magnolia, Dupin county, on the 30th inst., for the purpose of determining the time and place of holding the next Democratic Congressional Convention, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the committee.

Chatham Record: It is said that a ferocious wild animal has been roaming through the country on Deep river, a short distance above Lockville. Some persons say that it is an African lion, while others think it is a panther. Several hogs have been devoured by it, so it is said. It's roar at night is said to be quite terrifying. Some persons claim to have seen it, and that it is larger than a Newfoundland dog.

Goldboro Headlight: There are at present 916 children attending our graded schools—308 in the white and 608 in the colored. There is a small bull yearling in Indian Springs township which is a ter or is that section. It attacks groups of people, scatters them in every direction, and does all the dly weapons. The other day he was shot at and laid out for dead, when all at once he came to lie down and chased his would-be murderers for about two miles. The animal belongs to Mr. John Williams.
