EXPERIMENT WITH THE MORMONS.
 This Congress is to be asked to make an experiment with Utah. As is well known, the Mormons have of late been making professions of entire severance from polygamy and desire to control State temporal matters, but there is a lurking suspicion on the part of a number of political leaders of both classes that if Utah was admitted as a State the former condition of affairs there would be restored, the Federal Government being then powerless to interfere. The Utah people say that these fears and apprehensions are groundless, and that they have framed a bill, which has been introduced in Congress, which if enacted will give them local self-government and leave to the Federal Government control over the question of polygamy. This will, as it were, put Utah on probation. It is a new departure from the established form of Territorial government, but Delegate Caine, of Utah, says that this objection should not be urged against the inherent rights of the 200,000 people who inhabit the Territory.

The general sentiment among the members on both sides and also among the Senators is that this scheme is worth trying. It intrusts the Utah people with an enlarged franchise, but the power to restrict this franchise is still left in the hands of Congress. It is probable, therefore, that a change on the form of government in Utah will be accomplished before the present session adjourns. The Senate committee will give a hearing on February 11 to persons from Utah in favor of and opposed to the measure.

It is the purpose of the Iowa Democrats to present the name of Gov. Boies to the next Democratic National Convention as a candidate for President. At the meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee the matter was discussed at some length. The committee had met to close up the affairs of the last campaign. When this business was disposed of Chairman Fuller brought up the question of Gov. Boies's candidacy and urged the necessity of immediate action. He said there is much probability of the nomination coming West, and there is no more promising candidate to be found than the Governor of Iowa, who had led the Democratic party to victory in three successive campaigns. His record is known throughout the land, and he has earnest friends and supporters in every State in the Union, and organized effort should be made to get them together and at work in the right direction. Mr. Fuller's remarks met with the approval of every member of the committee, and it was decided to call an early State Convention to select delegates to the next National Convention when the time and place of holding the Convention shall have been made known. Iowa Democrats are in earnest in the movement to present the name of Gov. Boies as a candidate.

A joint resolution was adopted in the Virginia legislature calling upon Congress to erect a monument in the shape of a lighthouse on the rip-raps in Hampton Roads to the memory of Commodore Matthew Fontaine Maury. The resolution was introduced into the house of delegates by Mr. G. D. Letcher, son of the war governor of Virginia.

The political situation in Indiana, which may result in the nomination of Representative Hynum for governor, is being watched with considerable interest in Washington, says the Post, where Mr. Hynum has many friends, both in and out of Congress. It is understood that a delegation of Indiana Democrats will be here early next week to discuss the matter with Mr. Hynum, and the outcome of this conference will be Mr. Hynum's decision as to whether he will enter the gubernatorial race. At present he is certain of a practically perpetual term in Congress, and the restriction of a certainty for the more pretentious but not so easily obtainable seat in the governor's chair presents a dilemma that doubtless gives Mr. Hynum considerable food for reflection.

Personal and Otherwise.
 Mrs. Julia House, of New Orleans, is celebrating her 100th birthday on Wednesday. Her father, Joseph Oaken, was one of the men who rowed Washington across New York harbor on the occasion of his inauguration, and her husband made the boat Fulton's first steamer.

The Westminster Confession.
 New York Sun, 16th. The committee of the Presbyterian General Assembly, which is engaged in the work of the final revision of the Westminster Confession, met again yesterday and held a long session. All the members of the committee, with the exception of Drs. Leftwich, Nichols, and Alexander were present. Senator McMillan arrived early in the course of the morning session.

The committee spent the whole of the day, with the exception of the closing half hour, discussing the preterition clause in the Confession, and practically nothing was accomplished, as the matter was further referred to a committee of five. The clause which was under consideration is a d which is the most important one in the Confession in view of the revision, and the one on which the majority of the presbyteries have gone to pieces in sections 5 of chapter 3. It states, after arranging the welfare of mankind God was pleased to pass by and to ordain them to dishonor and wrath for their sin, to the praise of His glorious justice." This was amended by the original Committee on Revision so as to read that God was pleased "not to elect unto everlasting life, but to ordain them." Sec. This amendment has far from met the desires of many presbyteries who want, in effect, to leave this clause out altogether.

The committee yesterday spent the whole day discussing and suggesting how this could or should be treated, and a very great many propositions were submitted which would "smooth down the rugged text to ears polite, and snugly keep damnation out of sight." Finally it was decided to refer the whole matter, with all the suggestions made by the various presbyteries, and by the committee yesterday, to a committee of five, which is to report a final proposition itself to report to be again considered, and the fate of this clause may not be settled for some considerable time. The committee is made up of Dr. Morris, Dr. Patton, Dr. Herrick Johnson, Mr. William Ernst, and Judge Alfred Hand.

The proposition that was most considered yesterday was to omit the words "not to elect to everlasting life," and the word "them," which would make the clause read: "The rest of mankind God was pleased to ordain to dishonor and wrath for their sin."

Another for Brice and Thomas.
 BALTIMORE, Jan. 14.—An ordinance providing for the purchase of the city's interest in the Western Maryland Railroad has been prepared by Gen. Bryant of New York, and it will be presented to the Council next Monday. The principal backers of the enterprise are United States Senator Calvin S. Brice and Gen. Thomas, both of whom are largely interested in the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia, Richmond and Danville, and Norfolk and Western systems, all of which are anxious to reach Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York at less expense than is now possible for them. This could be accomplished if the roads named had a choice of two routes instead of one, as is now the case.

The Shenandoah Valley division of the Norfolk and Western, which extends from Roanoke, Va., to Hagerstown, Md., furnishes the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia system with an outlet as far as the latter town. To reach New York and other points it is necessary to send passengers and freight by a long detour and over routes which are not entirely friendly to the management of the former.

The purchase of the Western Maryland Railroad would solve the difficulty. The Richmond and Danville would also, it is claimed, send much of the northbound traffic by the new route, if the deal is consummated.

INCIDENTS IN THE HOUSE.
 Will make a visit there and the House of Representatives last night.

Washington, Jan. 15th. The reception which Gov. Hill received on the floor of the House, however more than compensated for the lack of interest in the proceedings. Indeed, this reception, the clever reports of Mr. Dookery and the great between Mr. Dookery and Mr. Dingley, in which the former told the latter to sit down, were the only cases in the dreary waste of generally uninteresting talk. Gov. Hill came over from the Senate to the House shortly after 1 o'clock, and for an hour and a half was surrounded by his fellow Democrats. Upon his arrival he was warmly welcomed by Representatives Dookery, Cochran and Ames Cummings, and was piloted to a seat behind the speaker at the fear of the members' desks. His presence soon became known and he was surrounded by members. The cordial greetings accorded him were so effusive that the hostile annoyed Mr. Dookery, who just then was up to his neck in a squabble of financial statistics.

"If the gentlemen in the rear of the seats," said Mr. Dookery, his patience finally exhausted, and turning around so as to see the new Senator, "will find some other place to hold reception I will continue my remarks."

This protest and the earnest request of the speaker that the members take their seats was effective for a few moments but the continuance of the ovation compelled Mr. Dookery to appeal to the Speaker a second time to protect him in his rights. While the reception lasted Senator Hill was presented to nearly all the Democratic and several of the Republican members present.

After the departure of Gov. Hill the debate was enlivened in some degree by a vigorous speech by Representative Livingston, of Georgia, who, as president of the Farmers' Alliance of that State, is naturally regarded as one of the mouthpieces of the new party. Gen. Hooker, of Mississippi, and Mr. Owens, of Ohio, broke away from their party to oppose the Holman resolution, the first because he believed it was too narrow in limiting expenditures to Department appropriations, and the latter for the reason that he did not see why he should decide today how he was to vote at some future time. While these Democrats were speaking the open space in front of the speaker's desk was crowded with members who were not favorably disposed toward the resolutions and who warmly applauded these attacks.

At this point the hour for closing the debate having arrived, a vote was expected, but Mr. Holman, who had been appealed to by Democrats to permit a change in the phraseology of his resolution, took another tack. He announced that today he would move a reconsideration of the vote by which the previous question was ordered and suggested that the House adjourn. If it did not adjourn he would in the mean time, he said, decide whether or not to press the motion when the House reassembled.

"Does the gentleman withdraw for repairs?" asked Mr. Reed.

"Yes," admitted Judge Holman, although the response was lost in the spontaneous and hearty laughter of both Republicans and Democrats. A few minutes later the House adjourned.
