The following is a synopsis of the weather prevailing at 8 a. m. today Two areas of high pressure appear upon the map this morning, one of which is central at Boston, and the secondary one of which is at Wilmington. These two areas predominale over the weather condition to the east of the Mississippi river, and produce generally fair conditions over all that section. Light showers have occurred over all that portion of the tountry lying immediately on ring at several points along that sectry. l'emperatures have remained nearly stationary over the country.
