WOULD TAX TRUSTS

Senator Morgan Advocates This as Retributive Justice TO BEAR SHARE OF BURDEN

The Senator Cites the Principal Involved in the Special Taxation of the Opium and Intoxicating Liquors

Washington, Sept. 11.—Gen. John T. Morgan, United States Senator from Alabama, whose opinions are always listened to with respect by his colleagues, is with great vigor advocating a scheme to tax the trusts by the Federal Government. He says they can be taxed in a perfectly constitutional way and regulated or driven out of business. Mr. Morgan has written a letter on the subject, in which he says:

"I think it is admitted on all sides that the power of Congress to levy taxes extends to every description of property that is not exempted by the character of its ownership. If it belongs to a State, or to the Federal Government, or an instrumentality of such Government, it is exempt from taxation; but all kinds of property not so exempted are subject to taxation by act of Congress. If it is real estate the taxes must be apportioned among the States according to population. These are the only restrictions upon the power of Congress to tax any description of property that I need advert to.

"A corporation is an 'artificial person' whose property is as liable to taxation as that of a natural person, and the capital stock and all assets of a corporation are taxable as property. "A great many instances of such taxation, in a great variety of forms, under State and Federal laws, can be cited to show that corporations are liable to taxation in ways that would be in restraint of constitutional rights and privileges if applied to natural persons. For example, their franchises—being their right of legal existence—may be lawfully taxed, while human life is not taxable. Being creations of the law, corporations have no rights of exemption from taxation that are not conferred by law.

"The general welfare demands the taxation of corporations rather than to add to their special privileges by exempting them from a just share in the burdens of government, and this principle is acknowledged in many State and Federal laws.

"Outside the limits of express restrictions there is no power of taxation under the Constitution that is a necessary element of such power, and it relates to the general welfare, as a special function of the laws of taxation, confined to their protection.

"This is especially exemplified in the taxation of opium and intoxicating liquors, which are taxed for the purpose of repression, as articles of commerce, and also for the preservation of peace and public morals.

"It is also a wholesome exercise of retributive justice that corporations created by law should be taxed to the full extent that they tax the people by the abuse of the powers given them through the creation of monopolies and 'trusts,' which they are the principal incubators.

"The plan I would suggest in addition to the Sherman law is a graduated tax on all business corporations, with an exemption in whole, or in part, as to such as can establish to the satisfaction of the Government that they are not engaged in any agreements or combinations that are intended to control the prices or the cost of transportation of commodities that are of the description that enter into domestic or foreign commerce.

"The power thus exercised is simply the taxing power and is not necessarily connected with the power of Congress to regulate commerce between the States or with foreign countries."—Baltimore Sun.
