Recorder in quite a while was that today of C. C. Grier, a well known colored man who runs a pressing club on Poplar street, charged with selling whiskey on Sunday last. The chief witness against Grier was Jim Whitt, a white man, who said that he went to Grier's place on Sunday and inquired if he could get something to drink; that Grier told him he was out but could get him something; that Grier returned after a few minutes and handed him a bottle containing about half a pint of corn liquor that he (Whitt) then gave 35 cents to Grier and left the place. Grier when placed on the stand said that he did give the man Whitt some of his private stock and that the 35 cents was a debt which Whitt owed him for pressing clothes. Grier was required to give a bond of one hundred dollars and Whitt was also placed under a similar bonds as a
