Glenn, who died this morning were carried to Greensboro on the 3:30 o'clock train this afternoon, accompanied by Governor and Mrs. Glenn and other members of the family and several State officers.

The interment will be in the family burying ground there tomorrow morning. The pall bearers were Secretary of State Grimes, Auditor Dixon, Treasurer Lacy, Judge W. A. Hoke, and Mr. F. H. Busbee. General Glenn died at 12:30 o'clock. He had been ill since Sunday. He was 53 years old and leaves a wife and three children.

The North Carolina Literary and Historical Association at their sixth annual meeting last night elected Governor Chas. B. Aycock, president; F. A. Sandley of Asheville; H. L. Smith of Davidson and Mrs. Lindsey Patterson of Winston-Salem, vice presidents and Clarence Poe secretary-treasurer. The association adopted a resolution calling for the placing of a bust of Hon. Zebulon B. Vance in one of the niches allotted to North Carolina at the national capitol. This was at the close of an able address by Judge W. A. Montgomery. Announcement was made of the award of the Patterson loving cup for 1905 to John Chas. McNeil of Charlotte for the best literary production of the year. It is to be awarded by President Roosevelt tomorrow morning at the Governor's Mansion. Congressman Small delivered an address on the need for a fire-proof State Library building and the enlargement of the State capitol building. A resolution urging the necessity of this was passed and a committee to work to this end is to be announced later.

The Supreme Court decides the noted fish-net case from Dare county. Daniels vs. Homer—the opinion of the court written by Judge Clark holding that the legislature has the power to authorize a fish inspector to seize nets placed in inlets contrary to statute and sell them without notice to the owner. Justices Walker and Connor dissent from the ruling of the court on the ground that under the constitution the owner should have an opportunity to be heard before the property is condemned.

In State vs. Maultsby from Cumberland, the opinion just delivered, the court holds that the special Cumberland statute providing that half the fines for violation of the liquor laws shall go to the informers is unconstitutional in that all fines must go to the school fund.

Another Cumberland county case is Jackson vs. Telephone Co., the court being affirmed in a judgment for $900 damages to the plaintiff for false arrest, it appearing that the management of the telephone company had Jackson arrested and held in custody solely in order to run their line over his lands without resistance. The charge on which damage was obtained was false arrest.

In Cozar vs. Hardwood Co., from Cherokee, the court holds that private citizens have no right to condemn lands for right of way to get out timber and that rights of way can only be condemned when they are to be for public use as highways for the people. The court sustains the statute as to cuttings but holds that the amendment of 1887 is invalid because it does not prove that the public may pass over the "ways."

The changes in the program for the reception and entertainment of President Roosevelt tomorrow made necessary by the death of General Glenn have been about completed. There will be no breakfast served to the Presidential party at the mansion. Instead, the President will breakfast on the train. The procession, military and civic, will form at the station at about 9 o'clock to escort the honored guest and his party to the senate chamber of the capitol building, the line of march being up Martin and Fayetteville street. There the Patterson Loving Cup of the Literary and Historic Association will be presented to John Charles McNeil by the President. There will be informal receptions both at the station and at the senate chamber. The procession to the fair grounds will form about 10:30 and proceed up to Hillsboro street, probably circling the capitol square first. These are the only changes except that Lieutenant Governor Francis D. Winston will introduce the President in
