Are you losing your sense of smell? Is there a dropping in your throat? Are you losing your sense of taste? Are you gradually getting deaf? Do you hear buzzing sounds? Do you have ringing in the ears? Do you suffer with nausea of the stomach? Is there a constant bad taste in the mouth? Do you have a hacking cough? Do you cough at night? Do you take cold easily? If so, you have catarrh.

Catarrh is not only dangerous in this way, but it causes ulcerations, death and decay of bones, loss of thinking and all reasoning power, kills ambition and energy, often causes loss of appetite, indigestion, dyspepsia, raw throat and reaches to general debility, idiocy and insanity. It needs attention at once. Cure it by taking Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.). It is a quick, radical, permanent cure because it rids the system of the poison germs that cause catarrh. Blood Balm (B. GETTING STRATED IN THE MORNING

School Girls Have Trouble Getting to School in Time—Habit of Sitting Up Late in Warm Room, Talking, Singing or Perhaps Studying Makes One Drowsy Next Morning—Haste Will Uproot the Calm of a Whole Day. Begin the Day Leisurely—Take Plenty of Time to Dress and Eat Breakfast.

(BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.)

(Copyright, 1906, by Jos. B. Bowles.) Penelope came in with a frown on her brow. Her pretty face was puckered. Her mouth dropped at the corners, and she had almost the effect of being in a very bad temper. Penelope is one of my greatest favorites, and was sorry to see that with her the wind was in the east. "What on earth has gone wrong, my dear?" I said, anxiously. "With whom are you vexed, and why are you out of sorts? Have you lost your purse, or your place in the class, or fallen out with your chum, or are you convinced that you never will conquer irregular verbs, or what is the matter?"

"The matter," said Penelope, "is my monthly report. I am awful disturbed about it, and ashamed to show it at home, and I am angry at Miss —, who might have made it a great deal better if only she had chosen, but I am not one of her pets. I have had good marks in French and in astronomy, in algebra and geometry, some days, anyway, if not every day, and here am I marked B and C and C minus, and I have not a single A in the whole month. My teacher handed me this very reprovingly, and said that such a report was as great a mortification to her as it could possibly be to me, and she trusted I would do better another month, and not have to take such a record home again.

"Possibly, Penelope," she said, "you are graded too high and would better drop some of your work and fall back into a lower class." Do you wonder," stormed Penelope, "that I am furious? Who wouldn't be?"

"I hardly see, dear child," I answered, "why you should be furious, as you call it, although I think your unfortunate teacher has every right to be indignant. What is the reason that you have done so badly? The work is not too much for you, your health is perfect, and you ought to be at the head of your class, bringing home reports sprinkled with A's, like stars in the sky or daisies in a meadow in June. You must be shockingly careless, or you would get on in school as well as anyone else. Where is the loose plank? Something is wrong in your way of working. If we could find out just what it is and where it is, we might mend it. Don't you think so?"

"You are very cross," said Penelope, "and not a single bit sympathetic, and I wish I hadn't come. But maybe I might get on, as you call it, a little better if it wasn't such hard work to start in the morning. I am so sleepy that I cannot wake up when I am called; then I have to scramble through dressing and breakfast and fairly fly to reach school in time. Very often when there I find that I have forgotten a book that I need or my pads and pencils, and I am so upset that it takes me almost an hour to feel quiet and composed. My day somehow runs off the track every morning and does not get back until the afternoon."

By this time Penelope's scowl had vanished and she dimpled and blushed and finally laughed, like the sweet, good-tempered girl she is. "You dear," I said, "you have put your finger right on the weak spot. Your whole trouble comes from not beginning the day aright."

So many school girls have exactly the same trouble that I wonder very much why it is not that their mothers and teachers do not help them out of it and that their own good sense does not come to the rescue.

The truth is that a successful day for a school girl begins at nine o'clock the night before. At that hour she should say good night to everybody and go to bed. If she has had dinner early and feels a bit hungry, it will do her no harm to take a very simple luncheon of bread and milk before she prays, put out the lights and go to bed and to sleep. It is the wretched habit of sitting up until half-past ten or 11 in a warm room, with the family talking, singing, playing games or the piano, or perhaps studying too late, that makes girls drowsy in the morning.

Sleeping in an ill-ventilated room helps along. Be very sure that you have fresh air to breathe while you are asleep, and protect yourself against cold if necessary, by wearing a garment of outing flannel or of some woolen stuff instead of too thin a night dress. If a girl goes early to bed and sleeps soundly all night, she will be able to rise as soon as she is called. Haste in the morning upsets one terribly and literally pursues one like a fiend all the rest of the day.

Rise in time to take a sponge bath from head to foot, to arrange your hair, and on have few tranquil moments for devotion. Never think of leaving your room to begin any day without kneeling in prayer to the Heavenly Father Who has watched over you during the night, and Who will guard you during the day. Eat your breakfast slowly, gather your books and papers with deliberation and set off to school with a light heart. Hurry and worry devour one's ease of mind and make it impossible for one to do justice to her own powers.

I think I can tell in looking around the room of girls which of them are in the habit of beginning the day in this leisurely and sensible manner, and which tumble out of bed and into their clothes and lose their wits and their tempers before they have attacked the day's business.

An ancient philosopher once said that there was everything in keeping an even mind. Those of us who have a good deal to do in the course of a day or a week, are well aware that we accomplish nothing if we lose our heads and rush where we should instead go slowly.

So great a thinker as Francis Bacon, who was a very learned man, said in an essay in Dispatch "that above all things order and distribution and singling out of parts is the life of despatch. For he that doth not divide will never enter well into business. To choose time is to save time, and an unseasonable motion is but beating the air. I knew a wise man that had it for a by-word when he saw men hastening to a conclusion, stay a little that we may make an end the sooner."

If so great a man as Sir Francis Bacon thought it well to act with deliberation and map out his days with forethought, do you not think that schoolgirls like Penelope and her friends may as well do the same?

After my talk with her I had it out with myself. I said: I wonder if I, too, cannot turn a new leaf here. We older people may as well be frank. We do not always set the girls the best example when the matter is one of beginning the day.

There is great comfort in doing our best and leaving the rest. As Longfellow says, pithily: "Trust no future, however pleasant, Let the dead past bury its dead; Act, act in the living present; Heart within and God overhead."

MARRIED HIS STEPMOTHER.

Wife Charges Young Husband with Non-Support

New York Feb. 9.—Thomas Hardy, aged twenty-three years was arraigned before Magistrate Pool in the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday afternoon on a charge of abandoning his wife, and failing to support her. The woman, aged 28, told the Magistrate that Hardy married her three years ago, after her husband, Thomas's father, died.

"Then he married his step-mother?" "He did," was the answer.

A warrant was issued and the young man was taken to court. He was held in $500 bail for a hearing this afternoon.

The couple have a boy, about one year old. Mrs. Hardy said that for six weeks her husband gave her no money.

WOOLING OF MISS ALICE.

By Congressman Longworth to be Depicted in Music by an Orchestra.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer. The courtship of Nicholas Longworth and Alice Roosevelt will be told in an orchestra at the Cincinnati Opera House next week. The composition is by Herman Belstedt, the leader of the orchestra at that theatre. Musically it describes the trip of the Cincinnati Congressman and his bride to be across the Pacific to the imperial palace in Peking, China, and then back again to Washington where the wedding ceremony is depicted.

In the course of the musical narrative appropriate melodies like "Alice, Where Art Thou?" "Lovers Old Sweet Song," the wedding marches and patriotic melodies are introduced. After the festivities there is a pause, showing the lapse of several years, and then the orchestra softly plays a lullaby, with which the composition ends. Mr. Belstedt has called it "The Wooling of Alice and Nick."

AN INTERESTING STORY

The manager of a New York theater tells the following story: During a performance of "Rip Van Winkle," by the late Joseph Jefferson, the manager, who was standing in the lobby, observed a countryman hovering about the entrance in an uncertain way. Finally, as with a determination to go the limit, the countryman bought a ticket and entered the house. A little while after the manager happened to be in the lobby again, when the countryman came out with an expression of intense disgust upon his face.

"Well, how do you like the show?" the manager inquired, with secret amusement.

The irate farmer grew confidential. "Say, mister," he replied, "I a-goin' tew have a mighty hard time plainin' to Marandy what I done with them tew dollars, but you kin bet I won't tell her I paid it tew see an old feller fill up on licker an' go ter sleep, when I could a-gone up ter her tavern at her Corners an' a-seen old Bill Hardtree dew it fer nothin'!"—Success Magazine.

Superior Court in Session—Many Cases Considered—Dr. Potent to Lecture—Couple Wed—Other News.

Special to The News.

Lumberton, N. C., Feb. 9.—Robeson superior court for the trial of criminal cases convened Monday morning, with Judge M. H. Justice of Lutherfordford, presiding. The judge threw a bomb in the camp in the beginning of his address to the grand jury when he said that the present court house was entirely unworthy of a big county like Robeson and requested the grand jury to investigate the present condition of the building and make some report before they were discharged. The present court room is small and dark and the offices of the county officers are very poorly equipped. The building is anything but fire proof, and a fire would mean almost certain destruction of every record in the so-called vaults.

The temporary restraining order heretofore granted in favor of Mrs. Cochran, a northern woman who has a large farm near Fayetteville against the Raleigh and Southport Ry., was heard by Judge Justice in the chambers this week and resulted in a victory for the defendant company. The order was obtained to permit the company for its railroad across the lands of the plaintiff who alleged that she would be greatly damaged if the company was permitted to proceed with the construction of the road. The defendant sustained the order and the plaintiff was ordered to give bond to indemnify the plaintiff against all loss and damage sustained by her in the building of the road across her property. The plaintiff was represented at the hearing by Col. C. W. Bondfoot, of Fayetteville, and the defendant by Messrs. W. N. Simms, of Raleigh, and D. M. Oates, of Fayetteville. President John A. Miller of the Philadelphia Construction Company and W. H. Saunders and J. N. Lynn. The plaintiff alleged that a mortgage held by the defendants Saunders and Lynn on the property of the Philadelphia Construction Company was fraudulent and void, and that the defendants should be subject to the payment of certain indebtedness which the plaintiff held against the Philadelphia Construction Company. This property consists of a tract of land about five miles in length and a certain tract of timber situated in Britt township, near Kingsdale, in this county. Judge Justice dissolved the restraining order as to Messrs. Saunders and Lynn and also dismissed the action against the Philadelphia Construction Company until Tuesday evening.

The Philadelphia Construction Company was represented by Messrs. McLean and McCormick, and McIntyre and Lawrence.

The criminal docket was quite a large one but it will be very nearly cleared before the court adjourns. There is only one important case on the docket. This is for the killing of a negro in a fight at Panther Creek colored church during the holidays. This case will in all probability be continued until the next term. There are a number of motions to be heard during the term.

Dr. W. L. Potent, president of Wake Forest College, will deliver an address at Red Springs Seminary next Friday evening in the interest of the Women's Association for the Betterment of Public School Houses. There is a strong organization of the Association in the county and it is thought that the address will be productive of great good.

Dr. Daniel Crump, of this town, and Miss Annie Watson were married at the home of the bride at Bennettsville, S. C., yesterday morning. They came to Lumberton where they will reside in the future. The groom is a member of the firm of Crump & Floyd.

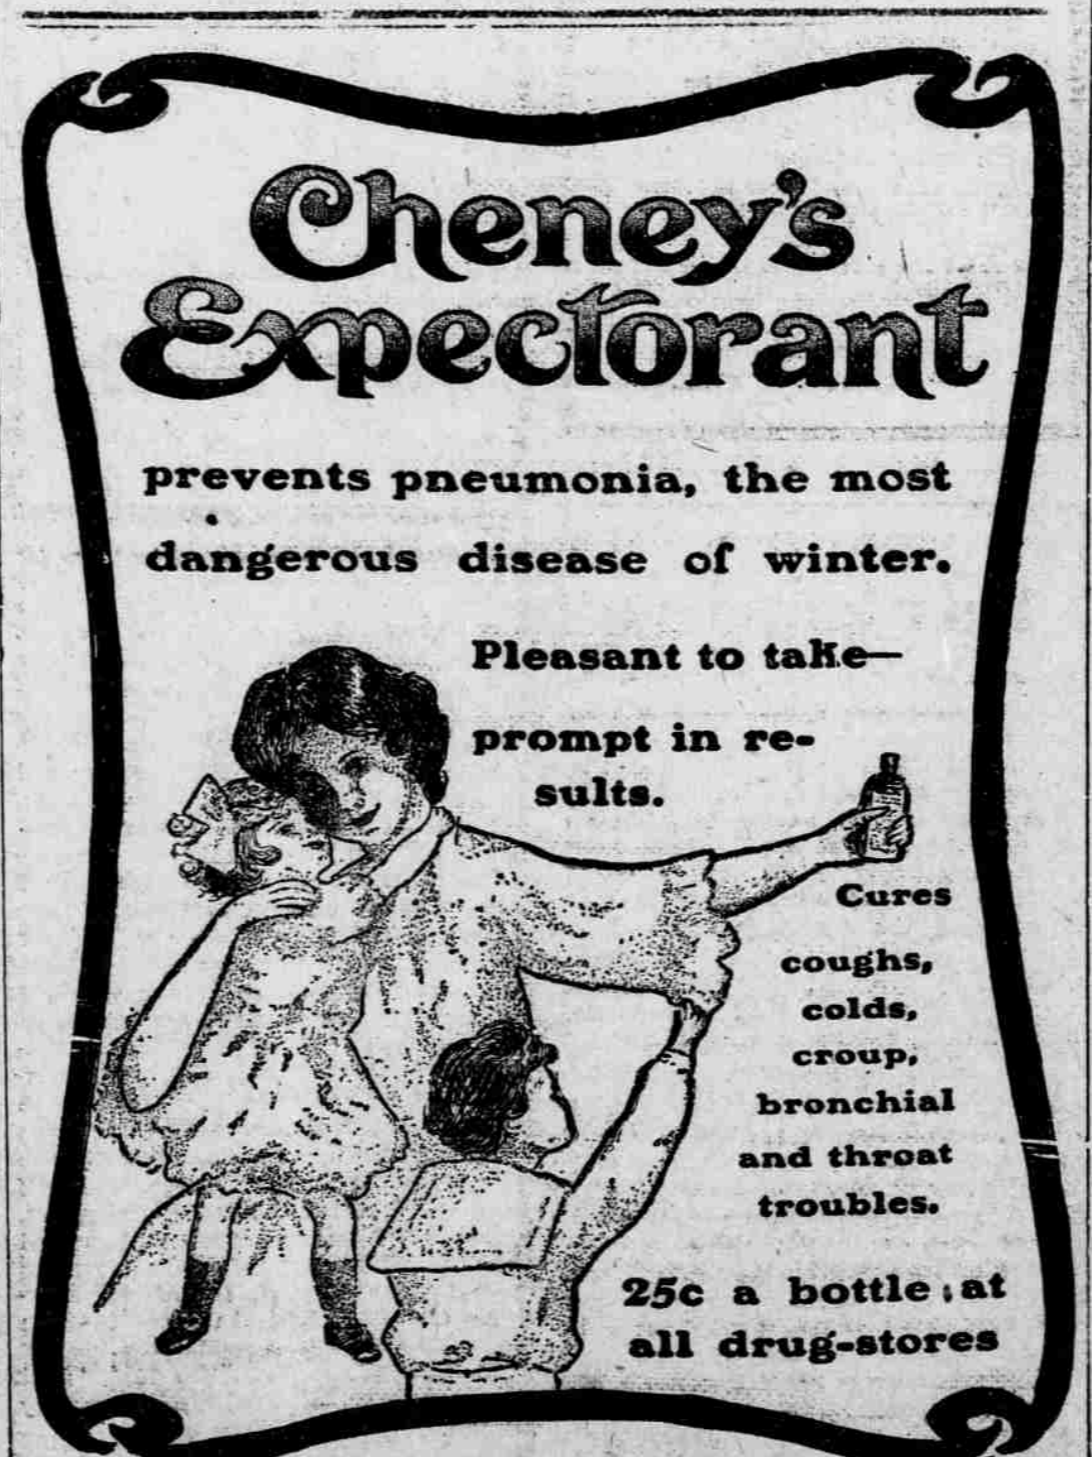

KILLED BY GIRL'S MOTHER. Confesses to Shooting Her Daughter's Sweetheart.

Parkersburg, Va., Feb. 9.—Mrs. Robert Whiteman, who resides near Elizabeth, in Wirt County, was arrested today and is in jail at Elizabeth on the charge of murdering Edward Deever. The latter was the favored son of Mrs. Whiteman's daughter, but was estranged from the mother, who forbade him admittance to the house. His dead body was found in the yard of the Whiteman home Monday night.

Evidence before the coroner's jury caused the arrest of Mrs. Whiteman, who admits that she shot him with a rifle, putting a bullet through his jugular vein at a hundred feet, when she saw him approaching the house. The daughter was a witness to the shooting of her lover by her mother.

Soon after beginning to take Electric Bitters, I obtained relief, and in a short time I was entirely cured." Guaranteed at 50c.
