CENTURY-OLD WINE.

Made by Great-Grandfather of Mr. Longworth—Gift From a Cleveland Man.

Cleveland, Feb. 13.—The wine in which the toasts will be drunk at the Longworth-Roosevelt wedding breakfast is the gift of a Cleveland man, W. H. Leonard. One hundred years ago the grapes from which the wine was pressed grew in the vineyard of Nicholas Longworth. The great-grandfather of the Congressman. The site of the vineyard is at present in the heart of Cincinnati.

For sixty years the wine lay in the cellar of the man who made it. Then, with many other bottles of the same vintage, it was brought out for the golden wedding anniversary of its maker, William Leonard, father of W. H. Leonard, was one of the guests at this celebration. To him were given three bottles of the precious wine. Only one remained to round out its century, and it is in this one that the health of the future Mrs. Longworth will be drunk.

This wine was sent to Washington last Monday. Mr. Leonard received a letter from Mr. Longworth today thanking him for the gift and assuring him that the wine would grace the wedding breakfast.

Little Biographies Of Big Masters

The short and simple annals of the poor! That's my life, and that's all you or anyone else can make out of it."

So spoke Abraham Lincoln when a well-known newspaper man asked him for biographical facts to use in his (Lincoln's) presidential campaign, quoting the pathetic and expressive line from Gray's Elegy as descriptive of his own early life.

"The short and simple annals of the poor." How truly indeed does this sentence cover almost all of Abraham Lincoln's worldly existence.

Born in Hardin county, Kentucky, February 12, 1809, of extremely poor parents, the child "Abe" had small promise of future greatness; if such promise comes through the possession of educated and conscientious parents whose worthy ambitions for their children's welfare find the means of accomplishment. But the fact is the little Abe began life in the midst of poverty and illiteracy, for at that time education was not easily obtainable in the South, and his father, Thomas Lincoln, could neither write nor read. But we are told his mother "could read and spell tolerably," and that she taught her ignorant husband how "to spell his way through the Bible."

When Abraham was seven years old his father packed the family and household goods into a covered wagon and migrated to Indiana where in a clearing on Pigeon Creek, they took up their abode in what was known as a "half-faced camp," being a rude log structure of three sides, one side being left open as a means of entrance, light and air, for Thomas Lincoln loved not to work and the building of doors and windows was doubtless thought too serious an undertaking for a carpenter of his ability. But the hardships endured in such a hovel, thus open to wind and storm, seems to have had some effect on him, and after a year spent in the miserable "half-faced camp" he built a more habitable cabin of logs, into which the family moved, a house about 14 feet square and boasting a doorway, without a shutter, and a good fireplace. And in this cabin a year later came the first great grief into little Abe's life, the loss of his mother. The description of this sorrowful event is quoted from Lincoln's admiring and conscientious biographer, William Henderson:

"Meanwhile Abe's mother had fallen a victim to the insidious disease. Her sufferings, had she been destined to be of brief duration. Within a week she, too, rested from her labors. She struggled on day by day," says one of the household, "a good Christian woman, and died on the seventh day after she was taken sick. Abe and his sister Sarah waited on their mother and did little jobs and errands required of them. There was no physician nearer than 35 miles. The mother knew two little children to her bedside. She was very weak, and the children leaned over while she gave her last message. Placing her hand on little Abe's head she told him to be kind and good to his father and sister. Then she bade them to be good to one another, expressing a hope that they might live, as they had been taught by her, to love their kindred and worship God." Amid the miserable surroundings of a home in the wilderness, Nancy Hanks passed across the dark river. Though of lowly birth, the victim of poverty and hard usage, she takes a place in history as the mother of a son who liberated a race of men."

Early little Abe was taught to be a skilled hunter, going with his father and boy companions through the great woods in quest of bear, deer, turkey and other game, which kept the family supplied with wholesome and palatable meat. This, with coarse cornmeal bread, constituted the principal diet of the pioneers.

About a year after Thomas Lincoln's wife died he made a trip to Kentucky, bringing to his rude home a second wife and a mother to his children. It

BONI'S OLD CLASSMATE.

Count d'Heudocourt Content to Be Known as Edouard Sargent.

Danielson, Conn., Feb. 13.—A former classmate and brother officer of Count Boni de Castellane has been a resident of this borough for about fifteen years. He is Count Edouard le Sargent, d'Heudocourt, but he is known here by the more democratic patronymic of Edouard Sargent. He is an unusually skilful swordsman, and he occasionally gives instruction to his friends. He is a man of education and culture.

The fortunes of the house of d'Heudocourt were impaired by the De Lesseps Panama Canal failure, but the house is still influential and wealthy in France.

The Count quarrelled with his family and came to America, but it is said he receives a monthly allowance. He says he does not envy his old classmate.

Jim—How did you fall in love with her? Is she pretty or is she rich?
Jock—Both. She's pretty rich.—Pittsburg Gazette.

A LESSON IN PAINTING A PICTURE.

Then tint the distant water a pale grayish-blue, deepening the blue in the middle distance; but the white dashes must be left to suggest white-caps. The water in the foreground should be blue-green, deepening in the shadows. Leave the foreground foam about the rocks and on the crest of the waves perfectly white. Lay a thin tint of rich sepia over the rocks.

When the picture is thoroughly dry press with a warm iron and mount it on a red mat for the walls of your "den."

GEORGIA MAY HAVE DUEL.

Editor Graves and Col. English Meet Today After Calling Each Other Liars.

Atlanta, Feb. 13.—Fears of a duel or a street encounter are causing much alarm among the friends of Editor John Temple Graves, of the Atlanta News, and Colonel James W. English, Jr., chief of the Governor's staff, who have in the last few days denounced each other as liars in published cards in connection with the litigation over the News, which arose from an injunction to prevent Graves from lauding himself on its editorial page.

Both men have records as fighters, and the caustic character of the epithets they leave no escape from personal satisfaction. In his last card, Colonel English said: "Colonel Graves is such a continuous liar that it is impossible to specify the myriad of lies he has told during the course of this affair."

Colonel Graves had previously said: "It is impossible to hear the name of English in Georgia without hearing the clanking of convict chains," referring to the fact that the English have been interested in State convict labor held by contract.

Colonel English has a glittering record as a military man. His quick resentment of an alleged slur on the recent staff made by Colonel Harry Silverman caused by a difficulty three years ago, in which only the persistent interference of friends prevented a resort to pistols.

The two men will meet in court tomorrow, and grave fears are felt that it will be impossible to prevent a personal encounter.

IS THIS TRUE, GIRLS?

Judge Mack Says You Deceive the Poor Men from the Start.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—"A girl begins a game of deception when she meets a young man and continues it until she is married. She can't cook and she is no housekeeper. In fact, she is ignorant of all the things that would make for the happiness of the young man. He becomes disgusted and goes to the saloon, and then there is the fiend to pay."

Judge Julian Mack was addressing the County Board which is investigating the social conditions as illustrated in the Juvenile Court.

"My investigations of wrecked marriages in the courts show that 70 per cent. of them are due to lack of training of the women to become wives," he continued. "They not only lack training, but they look upon marriage as an opportunity to escape from parental control and gain more liberty, or as a scheme whereby they are to be supported for life and give nothing in return."
