The Opera "Isabella"

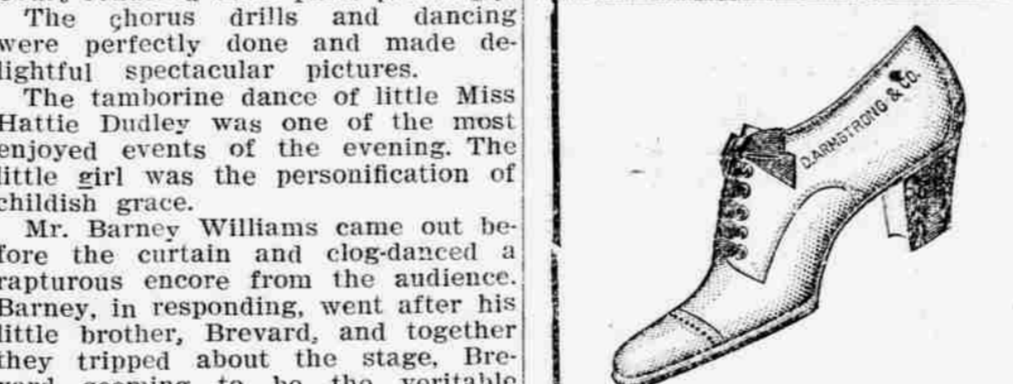

Brilliant Musical Event in Which The Early Difficulties of Columbus are Sung Amidst Spectacles of a Spanish Court.

Woven in brilliant threads into the great theme of Columbus' efforts to make his voyage across the unsailed waters, the comic opera of Isabella is essentially attractive. In the costume and stage effects last night at the Academy of Music, as well as in the interpretation of the various characters by local talent, "Isabella" as acted was fully equal to "Isabella" as written. One might have fancied that he had been taken back by some Genii's power through the four centuries to the splendors of the Spanish court of the great discoverer's day. The red dress and black scarf transferred Charlotte girls into the loveliest of Spanish señoritas. Electricity in its magic power of luminosity reached for the rainbow's hues and sprinkled the varicolored lights upon the stage with bewitching effects. Brilliant radiance, and splendor held rule upon the stage as well as Ferdinand and Isabella.

Miss Lucile Withers as the latter, carrying the leading soprano, was well worthy of the part. With her voice blended magnificently the part of Mr. J. H. H. Parks as Ferdinand. Their duet in the closing scene received almost tumultuous approval from the large audience, inasmuch that they had to respond to an encore the queen of song, as well as the Queen of Spain, having to descend from the throne for the purpose. King Ferdinand did not get quite mad enough over Isabella's demand for money to equip Columbus' for his voyage but if his natural good nature could not fully accommodate itself to Ferdinand's selfish tyranny he made up for it in the way he sang his part.

Mr. Roy Butt made a most excellent and ideal Columbus. He seemed cut out for the role of the serious voyager an dhis fine baritone never showed to better advantage than in the magnificent "Princess Joanna sang a sweet soprano, and her acting was faultless. Mr. Stevenson as Treasurer, Mr. Lyles as Herald, Mr. John Bass Brown as court jester, and Misses Lily Nash, Etheridge, Thomas and Frances McDonald as Ladies of the Court, were their parts pleasingly. The chorus drills and dancing were perfectly done and made delightful spectacular pictures. The tamborine dance of little Miss Hattie Dudley was one of the most enjoyed events of the evening. The Lucile Withers personification of childish grace. Mr. Barney Williams came out before the curtain and clog-danced a rapturous encore from the audience. Barney, in responding, went after his little brother, Brevard, and together they tripped about the stage. Brevard seeming to be the veritable little echo dance of his big bud. The ladies' chorus was composed of the following: Misses Lydia Nash, Wright, Butt, Sadie Davis, Isabel Lamey, Scott, Carr, Marie McKinley, Fay McKinley, Lucile Withers, Polly Shannonhouse, Ruth Summerrow, B. Blake, Mabel Asbury, Josephine Osborn, Evelyn Johnson. In the men's chorus, the following named participated: Messrs. Thomas Hayes, Benoit, John Kirby, Will Kirby, Ed Frank, George Belle, John Bass Brown, Murray, A. C. Philipotts, Frank Pegram.
