

Role Played by The Queen In Coronation Ceremonies

London, June 20.—While naturally the whole coronation ceremony centers about the king, there is considerably more than usual interest in the historic event of Thursday in the part that will be played by the queen. In this case, two queens will take part in the ceremonies, and as a result, there will be three thrones, more than in any other coronation in the history of the United Kingdom.

The queen mother, Alexandra, will be at the left of King George, while Queen Mary will be at the right. The chief part of the former's participation in the ceremonies will consist chiefly in joining in the coronation service to the royal commission while Queen Mary will figure as next important to the king among the actors in this imposing and historic event.

Nothing could be more impressive than the actual coronation ceremony in the abbey itself. The ceremony is medieval and even barbarous in its splendor, and the position of the queen is the most conspicuous one of any woman in the monarch's scene in the historic coronation. It is a spectacle which would wish to see nothing more imposing or more worthy of the great traditions of the British empire.

President will govern everything in the ceremony at the abbey. As the king and queen enter the historic building from the west, the queen will lead the king, and the queen will be seated on the throne, and the king will sit on the throne to the right of the queen. The coronation of the king and the queen will immediately follow.

With great pomp and circumstance the king will be anointed, and the queen will be anointed. The queen's part begins with her kneeling before the altar, supported by the archbishop, and she kneels while the archbishop says the following prayer:

"Almighty God, the fountain of all grace, give ear, we beseech thee, to our prayers, and multiply thy mercies upon this thy servant, Mary, whom in the name, with all humble devotion, we consecrate to our queen, defend her evermore from all dangers, bestow chastity and bodily piety, and a blessing to this kingdom; crown Jesus Christ our Lord, who reigns and reigneth with thee, O Lord, in the Unity of the Holy Spirit, world without end. Amen."

So will then arise and go to the throne of her anointing, a stool set for her purpose before the altar, her feet upon the steps and King Edward's hand. There she will kneel while four persons, specially appointed will pour a rich oil of clove of gold over her. The peresses selected are the duchesses of Portland, Sutherland, Hamilton and Montrose. The archbishop will then pour the holy oil upon her head, saying:

"In the name of the Father and of the Son of the Holy Ghost: Let the anointing with this oil increase your grace, and the grace of God's holy spirit establish you, for ever and ever. Amen."

The keeper of the jewel house will then give to the archbishop the queen's ring, which he will put on the fourth finger of her right hand, saying that it is the seal of a sincere faith and praying that God will protect her honor.

Then the archbishop will take the queen's crown off the altar and "reverently set it upon the queen's head," saying:

"Receive the crown of glory, honor and joy; and God, the crown of the faithful, who by our Episcopal hands (though unworthy) doth this day set a crown of pure gold upon your head, enrich your royal heart with his abundant grace, and crown you with all princely virtues in this life, and with everlasting gladness in that life is to come, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen."

The queen being now crowned, all the peresses will put on their coronets. The archbishop then places in the queen's right hand the sceptre (symbol of right to punish) and the sword with the dove in her left hand, symbolizing her allegiance to God.

Then, according to the authorized form and order of service, "as she passeth by the king on his throne, she shall bow herself reverently to his majesty, and then be conducted to her own throne, and without any further ceremony take her place on it." This will conclude the solemnity of the coronation.

There are three crowns for the queen consort. The cap of state worn by the king at the beginning of the proceedings will be represented in the case of the queen by the golden circlet originally constructed for Mary of Modena, Queen consort of James II, at a cost of $550,000. It consists of a beautiful cap made of purple velvet and turned up with ermine, which is itself encircled with a wide band of diamonds together with a string of pearls.

As the kings of England are invested with the crown of St. Edward, so diadem which is placed upon the head of their consorts has usually been known as the crown of Queen Edith, the Confessor's saintly wife. The old crown of Queen Edith was not of course required in 1861, seeing that the king was unaccompanied by his wife. With the coronation of James II, and Mary of Modena in 1685 it became necessary to provide for her majesty. This was accordingly done, but the crown had a somewhat checkered existence, owing to the fact that it has not always been required at English coronations. Hence it no longer finds a place among the English regalia at the Tower of London.

The crown of state worn by Mary of Modena, and, also, so it is believed, by her successor, Queen Mary II, is a beautiful ornament, and so richly adorned with pearls and diamonds that the gold which it contains is almost entirely concealed.

The queen's sceptre is of much the same character, but considerably smaller and less ornamental than that of the king. It is made of gold, adorned with diamonds and other precious stones, but the stem is not wreathed in the same elaborate fashion.

Tradition gives the queen consort at a coronation purple robes of velvet with ermine linings and a gown of white satin decked with pearls and tassels of bullion.

Queen Alexandra, however, broke the tradition, and decided to wear a robe of rose-red velvet, in color a perfect companion to the robe of state in which the king went to Westminster, and a gown of gold. At one time it was believed to be Queen Mary's intention to wear the mantle or train worn by Queen Alexandra at her coronation. But it is now known that her majesty will wear one especially made for her by Messrs Wilkenson. This will be fashioned of purple velvet, lined with ermine, thus returning to the earlier tradition. It was embroidered by the members of the Ladies' Work Society, of which Princess Louise (Duchess of Argyll) is president.

In its ornaments it rivals that of Queen Alexandra, whose gown and train were embellished with such rare and exquisite embroidery, enhanced with jewelry, that they dazzled the eyes of all beholders. The queen-mother sent the materials for her dress, the cloth of gold, and the white and golden tulle that veiled it, all the way to India to be embroidered.

Queen Mary's coronation dresses are throughout of British material and make. But in the matter of coronation robes, the general design, which was so effective in Queen Alexandra's case, is adhered to.

Too Late.

Years ago, when the "Panhandle" railroad was in course of construction, its progress was a matter of great interest to the people of the region. A farmer who sold provisions to the contractors often reached the place where the men were at work at meal time. He was greatly impressed at their voracity. The work was hard and when the dinner bell rang every man made a dash for the table, and before any one could believe it possible the food had disappeared.

One day a workman on his way to the table tripped on the root of a tree and fell. He lay quite still, making no attempt to rise.

The farmer rushed to him in great concern.

"Are you badly hurt?"

"No," answered the man.

"Well, why don't you get up and go to your dinner?"

"No use," returned the other, sadly. "It's too late now."—Youth's Companion.

Not So Complimentary.

George Gould was making one of his last trips as president of the Missouri Pacific. His private car was laid out on a siding for some reason or other, and he got out to stretch his legs. An old Irishman was tapping the wheels. Gould went up to him.

"Morning. How do you like the wheels?"

"Not worth a darn," said the Irishman.

"Well, how do you like the car?"

"It's good enough for the wheels."

"What do you think of the road?"

"It matches the car."

Old looked at the old chap for a minute.

"Maybe you don't know who I am."

"Yes, I do," retorted the Irishman. "You're George Gould, and I knew your father when he was president of the road. And, by gosh, he's going to be president of it again."

"Why, my father is dead," said Mr. Gould.

"I know that," replied the Irishman, "and the road is going to hell."—Chicago Tribune.

Society of Shakers Stands.

Louisville, Ky., June 20.—Judge Walter Evans of the federal court, handed down a decision today refusing to dissolve the Society of Shakers at South Union, Ky. The suit was brought by Mrs. Mary E. Porter, of Mount Vernon, Ill., on behalf of her aunt, Charity Hilton, of South Union, asking that the society be dissolved and her aunt given her share of the society's holdings.

Baby's Voice

Every woman's heart responds to the charm and sweetness of a baby's voice, because nature intended her for motherhood. But even the loving nature of a mother shrinks from the ordeal because such a time is regarded as a period of suffering and danger. Women who use Mother's Friend are saved much discomfort and suffering, and their systems, being thoroughly prepared by this great remedy, are in a healthy condition to meet the time with the least possible suffering and danger. Mother's Friend is recommended only for the relief and comfort of expectant mothers; it is in no sense a remedy for various ills, but it means a year of success, and the thousands of endorsements received from women who have used it are a guarantee of the benefit to be derived from its use. This remedy does not accomplish wonders but simply assists nature to perfect its work. Mother's Friend allays nausea, prevents sickness, and contributes in every way to a strong, healthy motherhood. GREENSBORO PROSECUTING BLIND TIGERS

Special to The News.

Greensboro, N. C., June 21.—For some unknown cause, it has been circulated among certain "vagrant circles" of the gentlemen criminal world all about, that after the commission form of government was adopted in Greensboro, she would be a wide-open town, the repeal of the inconsistent, if not ridiculous, Sunday blue laws by the new commissioners, which met the approval of 90 per cent of all classes seems to have been taken as a sign that Greensboro's new government would let up on prosecuting lawbreakers. There is no doubt about the fact that quite a large element of new sporting blood had begun to dump itself on the city. The police have been ever on the alert to detect and apprehend criminals of all classes. Blind tigering has become pretty general in spite of the utmost vigilance. Finally, two detective, R. L. Lumsden, of Raleigh, and P. M. McKeel, of Goldsboro, were secured several days ago, resulting in a wholesale arrest of several white men of more or less financial and social backing. Yesterday a bunch of them were tried and not only convicted, but for the first time in the history of blind tiger prosecutions and punishment of white men, Judge Eure imposed road sentences and road sentences from the city court now mean that these men will work like formerly less unfortunate negro defendants on the city streets.

True these white men were able to employ distinguished and expert lawyers to take appeals to the superior court and also to give big bonds for their appearance, thereby staving off trials indefinitely.

Last night one of these detectives, McKeel, was assaulted by three men on Washington street, and struck a terrible blow, cutting his upper lip wide open, requiring three stitches to sew it up. The three men, who proved to be chums of the gang who had been convicted yesterday, were tried before Judge Eure this morning, and Judge Eure finding them guilty, gave them a prospective dose of work on the streets, sentencing John Ray to six months on the roads, Charles Robertson and John Kainey three months each.

Superior court is engaged today trying Clifton Suggs, on a charge of embezzlement. He was manager of the Western Union office at High Point, and is charged with misappropriating funds of the company.

In the case of State against Thomas P. Armfield, indicted for an alleged abandonment of his wife, Judge Braham this morning moved that it be transferred to Mecklenburg county for trial.

At the preliminary hearing of Caleb Hanes, white, accused of criminal assault on Miss Maggie Bancroft, of Brown Summit, Judge Collins this morning, after hearing the revolting evidence, sent Hanes on to court without bond.

The Milam Medicine Co., Danville, Va.

Gentlemen:

My niece suffered for many years with a trouble pronounced by her physicians to be uric acid rheumatism and although he treated her, she never obtained relief.

Being well acquainted with Milam and knowing it had been used successfully very frequently in similar cases, I determined to get her on it. She took six bottles with the happiest results. I regard her as entirely relieved and will always take pleasure in recommending Milam for uric acid troubles.

Yours truly,
