

The Vogue Of Woman in White

Handbags of Linen—Princess Effects in Lingerie—Ribbon Girdles.

The woman in white, above all others, must be most careful to have her "underpinnings" perfectly fitted and carefully made, for as truly as in science the effect of the seen depends upon the unseen. The shops display the most alluring Princess slips, daintily lace-trimmed, which represent underwaist and petticoat in one. Every well-dressed woman will find this garment indispensable. They are adorable in pink, blue or corn-color silk or lawn to wear under white, with your various sets of colored ribbons.

The woman in white, above all others, must be most careful to have her "underpinnings" perfectly fitted and carefully made, for as truly as in science the effect of the seen depends upon the unseen. The shops display the most alluring Princess slips, daintily lace-trimmed, which represent underwaist and petticoat in one. Every well-dressed woman will find this garment indispensable. They are adorable in pink, blue or corn-color silk or lawn to wear under white, with your various sets of colored ribbons.

Figure One.

But leaving the woman out of the question altogether, if you had seen the Fifth Avenue parade give way to a dainty bit of femininity in white linen, white canvas shoes, white gloves, white linen parasol, white face veil charmingly draped over a white clip, and last, but not least, a white linen hand-bag, you would have realized two things. First, that it was a matter of personality, for you didn't see the face under that scoop and parasol, but that the impression was made solely by raiment; a present possibility to you. Get the correct cut and go ahead, you can't go wrong. Gratification in your success will reward you many times for the effort.

While so eminently attractive white is the least expensive of all summer wear, because it is washable. The shops are filled with inexpensive lingerie goods in many new weaves. There are beautiful cotton crepes, batons, lawns, mulls, nets, muslins and silks of all weights. Trimmings in white range from the still popular frills, ruffles, in bands, buttons, collars and cuffs, to all-day lace and cotton imitations, embroideries, cords, limp sashes, etc. The ready-to-wear accessories on exhibition show a genius for invention in the variety of high collars, sailor collars, fichus, stocks, cravats, ties, jabots and bertha collars (the entire nous, any clever woman can make them).

For a charming lingerie costume no better selection could be had than the one shown in the first illustration. The construction was very simple and can be attempted by an amateur. The latest features were provided for as well as the more conservative development. An especially desirable feature of this design was found in the opportunity it affords for the opportunity of flouncing. As illustrated it was fashioned of white voile trimmed with insertion and flouncing. This could also be made of dimity, marquisette, tulle, or any of the soft silks.

Simplicity and style are the features that recommend this design. It was a costume whose construction was free of difficulty, and yet it was not a severely plain model. Blue linen with white all-over embroidery and handing was used for the development. Any of the summer fabrics would be suitable for this design.

Then for your summer wardrobe, by all means have a set of each color in ribbons to wear with the white costume. Have a lovely Empire girdle of soft satin, or brocade with sash ends. Have a little lace bolero, ruffled with ribbon and finished with a big "chou" and long streamers at the back; have huge butterfly bows for the lingerie hat, as well as a bow for the parasol. Be sure to include a dash of scarlet for outings on the water, tennis, golf or the woodland picnic, for this dash of red is as lovely with white as in a pretty woman's cheek.

Figure Two.

The white hat is charming in fancy braid for morning wear, and again it is urged that its possession is not a matter of money but of intelligence; for, while very high priced in a milliner's window, it is a simple matter to select a becoming wire frame, cover it with white muslin and baste the white straw braid around it. The left-over braid may be tied into a big tailor's bow, and no other trimming is necessary. The lingerie hat is made in the same way, the crown being covered with all-over embroidery of lace, and the brim covered with gathered edging or lace. A simple garland of French flowers finishes a very dressy hat that is universally becoming, but the final garniture may be reserved for the big bow of ribbon above referred to.

Good Hunting.

"es, there's a few ducks out there," remarked the old hunter as he gazed out across the marsh at the cloud of teal "milling" up and down in the storm, but they don't compare to the wild pigeons that used to be back in Pennsylvania. Why, sir, I have seen the pigeons so thick back there that if we wanted to tell the time of day by the sun we would have to throw up a club through the flight before he could see it.

"I mind me one time of the queerest experience I ever had. I was out hunting rabbits with an old musket. It was late in the fall and the rabbits weren't very thick. I was coming home and had just got to the barn lot when a flight of pigeons went over. They were just above my head and when I looped up I thought that a cyclone was coming. As they passed I up with my old musket and let drive. By gosh, I never got a pigeon.

"I went on into the house some disgusted. Pretty soon my boy went out with a basket to gather up some chips for a fire and when he come back he had that bushel basket full of legs. I had shot under them pigeons and just had shot under them pigeons and just cut their legs off. The next day we went down to where they roosted in the timber back of the house and gathered up the birds. They couldn't sit on the limbs, so they fell off and were lying on the ground."—Outing Magazine.

He Was No Mossbank.

John Adams Thayer, publisher, once declared, at a dinner in New York, that when he was a printer he used to change his job six or seven times a year.

"I always bettered myself," said Mr. Thayer. "I always advanced my pay a dollar or more by every change. I remember a Boston foreman who said to me, when I told him I was leaving for Chicago. 'Well, I suppose you'll get a job out there, but remember, boy, a rolling stone gathers no moss.' 'Moss, sir,' I replied, 'is for ruins.'"—Washington Star.

NEW AUTO RECORD IS MADE.

Des Moines, June 26.—Harold R. Wells, son of President James O. Wells of the German Savings Bank, broke all speed records for touring cars between Chicago and Des Moines, making the run in sixteen hours and forty-five minutes.

The record previously has been held by Louis Evans of Des Moines, who covered the distance between the two cities in nineteen hours and fifty-five minutes. Mr. Wells made the trip in a well car. He registered at the Western Union office in Chicago and left that place at 2:45. He arrived in Des Moines at the Register and Leader office at 7:30 o'clock. Evans' time was beaten a full three hours.

Harry B. Staver, driving a Staver car, while attempting to establish a new record from Chicago to Des Moines, plunged into the Skunk River five miles south of Ames. An unruly brake, damaged when the car threw a wheel early in the run refused to work on a steep hill, and the machine backed down and over a fifteen-foot embankment.

Mr. Maxwell, general salesman for the Staver Chicago company, suffered a broken shoulder, but Emery Knudsen and Vere Reynolds of Des Moines and Mr. Staver, jumped and escaped uninjured. The accident occurred when the car was on the last lap of its long grind, and a new record almost had been won. The car will not suffer from its bath.

Disenchanted.

"Until I met you, Matilda," he murmured in a voice husky with emotion, "I believed that all women were deceitful, but when I look into your clear, beautiful eyes I behold there the very soul of candor and loyalty." "George," she exclaimed with enthusiasm, "this is the happiest moment I have known since papa took me to the London oculist!" "London oculist!" "Yes, dear; you never would have known that my left eye is a glass one."

Then the moon went under a cloud, and George sat down and buried his face in the sofa cushion.—London Answers.

His Needs

A North Dakota editor in commenting on an article in the society column of another paper, which stated that a certain Mrs. Newlywed kneaded bread with her gloves on, wrote—"The editor of this paper needs bread with his coat on; he needs bread with his pants on, and if some of the delinquent subscribers of the 'Glorious Rag of Freedom' don't pay up soon he will need bread without a rag on—and Dakota is no Garden of Eden in the winter time, either."
