GOOD WEATHER LAST WEEK

New York, April 28.—Major league baseball was favored with good weather during the last week and the schedule was played out with but few breaks. The teams in the East took full flings at each other. Of 51 games scheduled only three were postponed, although three tie games in the National League added to the already long list of double-headers that will come with the season's advance. This week marks practically the last of the sectional play for within the next ten days the Western clubs of the National League begin their invasion of the East while the American League's Eastern contingent starts its travels around the Western circuit.
