CHIPPENDALE AND CHINTZ.

In my lady's room about Ninety years ago Chairs with arms and chairs without Then stood in a row; While on curtain and on wall, In old-fashioned tints, Roses rambled—and 'twas all Chippendale and chintz.

Fashions wax and wane, and when Fifty years are spent, What my lady loved is then To an attic sent. Crinolins' alack! are worn (See the fashion prints), Crinolines whose wearers scorn Chippendale and chintz.

Now my lady from her frame Sees her room once more, As 'twas when a bride she came Gaily through the door; Where, in old-world tints, Roses rambled—and 'tis all Chippendale and chintz.

WORTH KNOWING.

TWO KINDS OF SWEETNESS.

There is a sweetness of the child, and a sweetness of the old. The sweetness of the child is largely independent of his personality. It is in his ways and in his looks, and the same thing is true, though not quite so much of the young woman. But when sweetness comes at sixty, it is the expression of the very nature of the soul.

MISS SPRINGS GOES TO NEW YORK.

Miss Esther White Springs left Monday evening for New York city to be the guest of her uncle, Mr. Austin Springs.

ONE DANCE PRICE $5.00.

Balls are expensive luxuries in the realm of the royal city, according to a London note to the Philadelphia Record, which says: "This season it has been noticed that hostesses do not spend such large sums on floral decorations at concerts and dances as they did 20 years ago. People still talk of the marvelous ball given by Mrs. Naylor, when it is said, the flowers cost $25,000. Nowadays a hostess seldom spends more than $500 on floral decorations."

FINISH FOR LOW COLLAR.

Cut eight pieces of bias crepe de chine, any color, one inch wide and eight inches long; sew the pieces "long ways;" turn them; tie a knot in the middle of each; bunch them up in jabot fashion; sew together at top; cover the joining with a large knot; put it on so pins will not show. This is very smart!

MRS. BARUCH TEACHING PATRIOTISM.

To Mrs. S. Wittkowsky, who is a constant reader of the New York papers, The News is indebted for the following from the New York Times. Mrs. Simon Baruch, whose kind and patriotic act the article is about, is the wife of the famous Dr. Simon Baruch of New York. Says The Times, January 11: "There will be a meeting of the National Society of Patriotic Women on January 13 at the Waldorf. Professor Fox and Mr. Prendergast will address the society. Mrs. Simon Baruch, who is one of the members, went with Miss Guernsey to the Children's Court one day recently. Among the cases brought up was that of two little Italians which interested her. They had been arrested for selling gum without a license and had resisted the officer and used vile language. Mrs. Baruch, after they had been reprimanded, invited them to her home, with their mothers as escorts, and after giving them the time of their lives, feeding them, and so on, bade them go home and pick out twenty other little boys who were addicted to bad language and bring them to see her. Then she said she would form two little clubs and each small leader should have a beautiful silk American flag to use when he called his club together. This flag he must honor, and the way to do that and to show proper respect for it, was to be a little American gentleman, and American gentlemen "never use vile language." This honor to the flag they have adopted, is part of what the society is trying to teach immigrants, believing that patriotism and love of country help largely in the making of good citizens. Mrs. Baruch has faith that the twenty little boys will appear, and she will try to teach them to help the "cops" uphold law and order and to realize that only good boys may become desirable American citizens."
