

THE CHRISTMAS DANCE

On Friday, December 16, Charlotte College held its Christmas dance from nine until one in the gymnasium.

A color theme of blue and white was used in decorations. Artificial snowmen, old fashioned lamp posts, and cedar trees decorated with blue lights were very suggestive of a white Christmas.

Carroll Dillinger and his band played.

Attending the dance were students and faculty members of the college, and also many alumni.

During the intermission, punch and decorated cookies were served by Miss Betty Ann Camp, Miss Mary Camp, and Miss Kate Bechtler.

Sponsors for the dance were Miss Ann Farebow for Jim Kilgo, president of the student body; Miss Cynthia Cook for Jim Poteat, chairman of the entertainment committee; Miss Phyllis Galphin for Glenn Baughman, co-chairman of the dance committee; Miss Joan Thomas for Earl Yandle, co-chairman of the dance committee; Miss Nancy Fortner for Cryton Rowe, Jr.; Miss Joan Marie Wilson for Ralph Turner; and Miss Dorothy Daggett for John Jamison.

Among old familiar faces that were a welcome sight to all were seen those of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Craig, Miss Kathleen Ferguson, Miss Ann Shue, Messrs. Sylvan Torgeson, Jimmie Mills, Harry McAfee and Joe Orr. Apologies to any whose names are not mentioned, as one person could overlook somebody in the crowd, but everybody was more than welcome home again.

The most glamorous Navy veteran ever to attend Charlotte College (in fact, about the only glamorous Navy veteran your reporter has ever known) also has the distinction of being the very first Charlotte College alumna to graduate from the University of North Carolina. Students, may we present Miss Isabel Bradford, B. S. in Commerce, class of '49, University of North Carolina.

When Charlotte College Center, U. N. C. opened wide its doors to G. I.'s in the Fall of 1946, "Izzy" was right on the top step, waving an eligibility certificate representing three long years in Uncle Sam's Navy. She had earned the training, and knew exactly what she wanted to use it for. Izzy had been a clerical worker with the Navy and had worked in an office. Izzy was also an office worker in Civilian life, and all in all she had spent quite a few hours in and around various offices. Izzy had seen a lot of business, heard a lot of business, learned a lot of business, and the sum total of what she had seen, heard, and learned left Izzy with one burning conviction - that she could learn just as much about business as some other people she knew, and then maybe she could put that knowledge to better use. "Them" was Izzy's sentiments, and she believed in them so much that, after five quarters at CCUNC, she was ready to enter the University at Chapel Hill as a full-fledged Junior. Not only had she completed her work at CC one quarter sooner than is normally required to complete junior college work, but she had also managed to maintain a Dean's list standing during that time, while working at War Assets Administration on the side. Remembering Izzy from those days, your reporter recalls the way Izzy Bradford turned the days into nights, and vice versa, attending classes all evening, and proceeding homeward to study all night, finally "turning in" for some much needed sleep during the wee small hours of morning. But it was worth it. After five quarters here, our heroine went on to Carolina to do a repeat performance. Five quarters at "The Hill", and up she came with that sought-after sheepskin, that spells the difference between lower and higher education.

Miss Bradford, as she is known presently, in certain circles, called attention to the fact that while her College major was in personnel, she at present holds the position of Current Billing Clerk, with Atlantic Refining Company, Charlotte office, and while she insists that the job is one of prosaic routine, having no earmarks whatsoever of glamour and glitter, it is the secret belief of at least one person that this particular blonde of whom we speak is merely biding her time as a billing clerk, pending the moment when she will be invited to step up as assistant to and understudy of the President of the Company. Just between us, any Company that counts Izzy among its employees can feel that "something NEW has been added."
