

49ers Roll, Clinch First Place Dixie Tie

By virtue of two conference victories last week, the UNCC basketball team clinched a tie for first place in the Dixie Conference. On Wednesday night, the 49'ers clobbered Greensboro College 112-82, and on Saturday night they slipped past the Lynchburg Hornets 76-62.

dominated the boards, pulling down a whopping 66 rebounds while Greensboro could manage only 40. Last Saturday night in their second annual homecoming game the 49'ers defeated a determined Lynchburg College team. Avenging an earlier season loss at Lynchburg, UNCC jumped out to an early lead and were ahead by as much as 14 points late in the first half. But by intermission, Lynchburg had cut the lead to seven at 36-27.

Following the Homecoming activities at halftime the 49'ers built the lead back to a comfortable margin. But Lynchburg was not yet ready to quit. With 8:30 remaining, they had cut the lead to two at 56-54. At this point, however, UNCC outscored the visitors 12-2. During this spurt, Ben Basinger seemed to always be there to tap in a missed shot and preserve the slim lead. The final 14 point margin was reached with 2:00 minutes remaining at 72-58. Norris Dae led all scorers with 22 points, followed by Larry Reid, who had 20. Wendell White led Lynchburg's scoring with 14 points. UNCC travels to Lynchburg tomorrow for the conference tournament carrying a 10-4 league mark. The team is flying high, having won eight of their last nine conference games. This momentum puts the 49'ers in an excellent position to defend their D.I.A.C. title.

Wednesday night saw the 49'ers put their highest point total of the year on the board. The contest was never in doubt from the beginning as Greensboro was completely dominated by the aggressive UNCC team. UNCC placed four men in double figures, three of them hitting for better than 20 points each. Larry Reid led all scorers with 28 points, followed by Norris Dae with 25, and Jim Turpin with 21. Jim Radford led the Greensboro scoring with 20 points.

UNCC led in every category, outscoring Greensboro 32-24 from the floor, and 48-64 from the line, opposed to Greensboro's 34-50. UNCC also

Hostile reactions to zoning plans

By Marcia Walker

UNCC zoning plan hearings were held on campus before semester break and three families objected strongly to the proposed zoning changes. They were represented by Attorney W. Faison Barnes who referred to the UNCC zoning plan as an attempt to keep surrounding property values stationary.

This institutional zoning ordinance would allow the land to be used for single family and duplex houses, colleges, hospitals, churches, schools, day nurseries, etc.

The ordinance would also include stadiums, banks, offices, country clubs, etc. with the approval of local government.

Hostility was apparent by the reaction of a standing ovation after each speaker opposing the UNCC zoning plan changes. The greater majority of the opposition to the zoning plan was focused on the apparent "vagueness and restrictiveness" of the institutional zoning plan.

The zoning plan was considered vague due to the fact that the specific guide lines for the definite use of UNCC lands for the next number of years are not stated in black and white terms. According to Barnes, this leaves the "institutional zoning on shaky legal grounds" that would fail to "withstand a court test."

The landowners will be allowed by this institutional zoning to sell their land for any purpose as long as it is evident that the UNCC area develops in the interest of the University City plan.

The "University City" plan includes the development of apartments and shopping areas to satisfy the demands of an expanding university campus. Hostility arose on this subject due to the fact that the restrictiveness of the institutional zoning will provoke difficulty for the landowners in selling and developing their land.

Referring back to Barnes' first accusation that UNCC's attempt to "freeze the value of the land" in order to buy the surrounding land at an inexpensive price, Dr. D. W. Colvard, chancellor of UNCC, has stated that "the school has sufficient land to meet its needs." Dr. Colvard stated no plans to move into institutional zoning lands for those lands are intended for the development of "an attractive city around the university."

Unions International Region V games tournament.

The tournament, beginning February 12 and concluding February 14, involved approximately thirty colleges and universities from five states. Approximately 230 students participated.

Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, and South Carolina joined North Carolina for competition in chess, bridge, bowling, billiards, and table tennis.

First and second place winners received plaques, and schools of first place winners got larger plaques.

UNCC's bowling team, composed of Danny Ewing, Ron Gandy, Steve Kendrick, Hugh Pace, and Ken Imes, captured third place in team competition.

Students from UNCC were ineligible for either chess or bridge competition because local contests were not conducted.

Jon Thomas, Director of the Union, stated that although competition was keen, "it's part competition and part fun."

Since UNCC is centrally located in Region V, many officials and students expressed opinion that the University will certainly be accepted as host again next year.

Mr. Hassan Ghadanfar, who placed second in men's table tennis (and with his partner Andrew Wong, captured first in men's doubles) was pleased with UNCC.

"The students are very nice here," the National Table Tennis Champion of Syria smiled. "Everyone is very friendly and ready to help."
