

The Carolina Journal

VOLUME SIX

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1970

NUMBER 11

49'ers win first four games

Rash hopes to talk to students

by claudia finkenaur

"I believe in students...they have real potential" was the comment of James Dennis Rash, the newly appointed Dean of Students.

The unconventional dean doesn't have two heads, a bull whip in the corner of his office or remind you of your father. In fact, he looks more like a big brother or best friend; he's involved with life and excited about his job.

He left his job of corporate lawyer with the firm of Moore and Van, Allen because he said, "education is where the action is." He said that the peace movement and "the birth pangs of ecology" grew from campus life.

Although Rash has met with student leaders, he feels that this isn't enough. He said that he wanted to get together with students—not in mass meetings—but more on a personal basis. He stressed the fact that he didn't want to just drop in on students and "snoop," but he'd like to plan visits with them and discuss whatever concerns them. He doesn't suppose that what concerns the student leaders concerns everyone. He feels that all students need to be heard.

Rash says that his main job will be to help the students and the administration get along better. As far as discipline goes, he wants to "hopefully come to general principles."

Being a dean is an experience, "It's fun and exciting, not dull. I found that out in the first three hours," says Dean Rash. He explained that he enjoys working with interesting people and the university community was a good place to find them. The university is more vibrant than most because the whole community is involved. It's a great feeling." He continued, "I think you get caught up with ideas and an ideal...you come because of the challenge...it helps you grow intellectually and spiritually," were only a few of Rash's reactions to his appointment. "When you find life is purposeful you move closer down the road." Rash feels that being dean is a "giant step down the road to it."

Rash isn't the only one who is happy about his position. His wife is very glad about it and friends have called and written congratulating him on what he referred to as his "suppressed desire."

At the moment Dean Rash is in the process of orientation. "You'd be surprised how much a dean has to learn," he said.

Within a couple of months, Rash hopes to be getting into the class room. There he expects to teach business law or business administration.

Norris Dae (No. 34) tips off big time basket ball at UNCC against Bryan College in our new gymnasium. (photo by richard bartholomew)

SGA-in-brief

"The foundations were laid for the SGA and Theta Psi to jointly open a book exchange..."

"The Student Broadcasting Association asked the legislature for $600..."

"The legislature approved a resolution passed by the Junior Class on December 3, and now under consideration by the Athletic Committee."

For further detail, read "Foundations laid for book exchange, on page 4."

49ers make successful debut in the Charlotte Coliseum Monday night. See related story on page 7. (photo by george l. neill)

Housing act ratified by dorms

by peggy caldwell

During the week of November 16-20, residents of the two halls voted on the Housing Act, the purpose of which is three-fold: to organize a governmental structure within the residence halls; to provide for the establishment of House officers (a House consists of the residents of two floors that share a common lounge) and a Residence Hall Council; and to set forth procedures to be followed by the halls concerning visitation.

According to the Housing Act, each House may set up its own time limitations, rules, and regulations concerning visitation, as provided for in and subject to the restrictions of the Uniform Visitation Policy of the Consolidated University of North Carolina.

The Uniform Visitation Policy limits the hours for visitation to 12 noon to 1:00 a.m., Sunday through Thursday, and 12 noon to 2:00 a.m., Friday and Saturday.

Under the University-wide policy, all doors to rooms being used for visitation shall remain "ajar." In addition, each campus shall adopt management procedures, including provisions for the action to be taken if the visitation policy is violated in any way.

The legislative section of the act sets the quorum for an Official House Meeting at two-thirds of the residents of the House. Additions to or changes in House rules, provided that they do not require uniform enforcement

(Continued on Page 5)

Unofficial Journal Poll

An unofficial Journal poll shows that the Housing Act was passed with little opposition.

By our count, there are approximately 440 men in Moore Hall and 489 women in Sanford.

The votes are as follows:

	Moore		Sanford
houses	for	against	for	against
1st	72	0	66	27
2nd	76	0	75	1
3rd	84	3	98	0
4th	86	12	79	0
5th	76	0	89	0
	396	15	377	29

Legislature

MONDAY, DEC. 14
11:45 a.m.
U209-210

meeting of the COURSE EVALUATION COMMITTEE

Monday, December 14 11:30
U231-232

Students are needed to hand out course evaluation packets to classes during the week of January 4-8.