UNCC's annual Honors and Awards Banquet was held Monday April 23. The banquet, which featured Charlotte judge James McMillan as guest speaker, is held for the purpose of recognizing the outstanding contributions of students, either in scholastic or leadership areas.

A reception was held in the Northwest Lounge at 6:30 and the banquet began at eight in Parguet Room. Chancellor D.W. Colvard welcomed the recipients, patrons, and guests prior to the banquet.

After the banquet, SGA President Richard Butterfield gave a brief speech recognizing the strength of the freshman class and the contributions made by those who had not received awards.

Judge McMillan

Judge McMillan was introduced by Chancellor Colvard and proceeded to speak on the challenge facing young people. The address also covered individual liberties and expressed as need for people and society to come to grips with maintaining individual liberties.

Following the address by Judge McMillan, Dean of Students Dennis Rash gave out the awards.

The Alpha Kappa Psi Scholarship award given annually to the senior male with superior abilities went to Bill Hayton.

The Charlotte Panhellenic Award to the freshman woman who exhibits poise, co-operation, and scholarship went to Holly Hall.

Gary Downer received the Chi Phi award for the Greek with the highest scholastic average.

Byrne Fuller received the UNCC Civicettes Award given annually to one of its own members.

The Bonnie Cone Award, to the freshman student who exhibits college spirit and has made a contribution to the school, was presented to Debbie Maynard.

Carol Grier and Doris Wilson received the Education Award, presented to two seniors who exhibit leadership, scholarship, and plan to enter the teaching profession.

The Francis M. Fitzgerald Award, of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, went to Tom Cassidy and Clifton Hammond, two seniors with teaching bents who have "demonstrated superior understanding of and cooperation with their fellow man of all races and beliefs."

Bill Mitchell

Gage Haskins and Tom Cassidy received the Bill Mitchell Award, given annually to two seniors with outstanding leadership and academic qualities who have shown an unselfish interest in the University and their fellow students.

The Special Red Cross Award was given on this occasion only to recognize Janet Wathey for action at a time of danger.

The Student Government Award for unselfishness and dedication was given to Gene Johnson.

Stan Patterson was the recipient of the Student Service Award given occasionally to students of an exceptional nature.

The Virginia Dare Chapter of the National Society of Daughters of the American Colonists Award, given to a freshman for scholarship and citizenship, went to Vanessa Gallman.

The UNCC United Way Award, to the fraternity or sorority making the greatest financial contribution to the United Way went to Delta Zeta and Alpha Delta Pi.

Then came the announcement of students who had been named to Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges. The 17 students named were: John Agnew, Sally Allison, Phaedra Berry, Michael Dobson, Karen Dorman, Oliver Harwell, Gage Haskins, Vickie Hinson, David House, Mike Mayberry, Winnie McNeely, Debora Osborne, Denise Prado, David Sanders, Patricia Stone, Melanie Martha Wilson, and Ellen Witter.

and... Speaking of Awards

The Southeastern College Newspaper Competition has awarded the Journal, an honorable mention in the Best Feature Writing category.

The winner in the category was the Vanderbilt Hustler; besides the Journal, an honorable mention was awarded to The Beacon of the University of Tennessee.

The Charleston Gazette, in presenting the award to the Journal, said:

"The innovative approach of this staff makes the Journal more magazine than newspaper. The guileless disorganization of material is relaxed, witty, and frequently quite effective. The writing often sparkles to the point where a 'nothing done' report becomes enjoyable reading. Despite the soft sell, the Journal reveals the staff's high-minded approach to campus and national problems as they affect the individual."

No one from the Journal was able to attend the awards banquet at Hollins College, Virginia, but the award was mailed and awaits its frame and honored place in the Journal office.

Clean Air Rally

Your own private automobile might be able to compete in the third annual Southeastern Clean Air Vehicle Road Rally April 28 at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

In the past two rallies, the emphasis has been on exotic entries, such as steam and electric powered cars. The electrics and steamers will be back along with a fly-wheel hybrid, but a street car has a chance to win.

A car to compete successfully in the rally must be able to meet the Environmental Protection Agency's standards for 1974-75 on emission controls.

However, Dr. Don Davis of UNCC's College of Engineering said, "Ten percent of the vehicles on the road now could meet the standards if properly tuned and maintained. This is a public awareness activity. We will have counselors on hand so that spectators can find out what they can do to have their own cars meet emission control standards." Entries expected include four electrics, one steamer, some propane-propelled vehicles, and some rotary engines.

"We hope to get one of the new pedicars," Dr. Davis said.

Competing automobiles will be tested for emissions from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The rally itself will begin at 1 p.m. It will begin with a slalom and end with a 20-mile road section. Average speed will be 22 miles per hour. Non-mechanical-powered vehicles (bikes) will have a six-mile course and will have to average 12 miles per hour.

Sponsors of the rally are the UNCC college of Engineering and the Engineer's Club, the Triangle Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, the Sun Electric Corp., the 49er Sports Car Club of UNCC and photographer James Neinast.

The event is free to entrants and to spectators.
