

letters

The Journal encourages all students to write in and voice their opinions. Names and addresses must be included as no unsigned letters will be considered for publication. The Journal will print all letters within space limits, but subject to laws of libel. Letters should arrive at the Journal office no later than Friday of each week prior to the next publication. The editor reserves the right to edit letters for length.

Holeshouser

What once was never been

To the editor:

I am sick and tired of the Journal's habit of giving credit and building up people to receive credit for the FM project. I will point out two specific cases: last semester the Journal printed a picture of Bob Proffit stating below that he was instrumental in obtaining FM. Not true. He has had nothing to do with it. In last week's FM article, the Journal printed a quote about the FM from Ted Cannaday. He has also had nothing to do with the FM project.

At this point, I feel I have an obligation to set the record straight as to who has been involved in this project from UNCC: Tom Swicegood, Steve Garrett, Joe Blanchard, Andy Pincus, Bonnie Cone, Steve Sox, Jim Yates, Todd Edwards, Frank Burke, Dr. Douglas Orr, Dennis Rash, Betty Chafin, Lee Simmons, Chancellor Colvard, T.L. Smith, and myself. (Apologies to those no longer here that I have failed to mention for lack of historical mention).

In closing, I urge the Journal to be more wise in selecting and rechecking their sources for material.

Dick Wyzanski

To the editor:

Recently there were conflicting arguments on campus in regard to the naming of a new building for our present governor.

The reasons for not doing so were so flimsy I could hardly believe them, which leads me to conclude that some of the UNC-Charlotte student minds are the results of being raised by the old Dr. Spock theory - they were babies, now are babies and after graduation will still be babies, because they suffer from the lack of the knowledge of living realities.

Imagine a junior at the institution, who gives the reason for not naming the building for the Governor, admitting that he can't spell Holeshouser.

If this is a general condition at the University, then we need to go back to basic READING - WRITING - ARITHMETIC curriculum - Or, we are wasting the taxpayers' money.

Geography careers: A workshop will be composed of three sessions, each lasting approximately one hour on February 5, 12, and 19 in Room 217, 12:00 noon, Smith building. The focus of the workshop will be in preparing the job-hunting geography major for finding a job. The emphasis in the discussions will be on making the student aware of the specific skills that he or she might have which a prospective employer should know about. During and after each of the workshop sessions, the faculty members involved will make themselves available for further advice and counseling as the student so desires. The first session on February 5 will concern careers in Earth Sciences, environmental studies and cartography to be lead by Drs. Nelson Nunnally and James Clay of the Geography and Earth Sciences Department. Open to all students.

If you have the spring semester blues then gather your troubles and toss them in the wind. Drop by the Rathskellar Thursday February 6 for the cure for all your blues. From eight til 12 p.m. for the mere price of twenty-five cents you can swing to the goodtime music of the Ruby Reds Warehouse Band direct from underground Atlanta. Dixieland music will be presented in the true spirit of southern entertainment. The Rathskellar will provide free peanuts in this 'bring your own' fight to end the blues.

So join the wild crowd for the party of the month at the UNCC Rathskellar. Remember the Rathskellar is located in the basement of the dorm cafeteria so if you loose your way follow the sound of the Ruby Reds.
