

LETTERS TO THE STUDENTS!

The Journal encourages all students to write in and voice their opinions. Names and addresses must be included as no unsigned letters will be considered for publication. The Journal will print all letters within space limits, but subject to laws of libel. Letters should arrive at the Journal office no later than Friday of each week prior to the next publication. The editor reserves the right to edit letters for length.

The Creators of the future are fast arriving...

To the Students:

While Carlos Bell and Philip Handler were out in the graveyard of history exhuming the discredited remains of Parson Malthus, the U.S. Labor Party and the pro-human faction of scientists constituting the Fusion Energy Foundation have been leading discussions and forums on campuses and before working class audiences around the country developing the programmatic details of socialist expanded production--the solution to the present conjunctural crisis of this capitalist depression.

Those who attended the showing of the FEF videotape on campus last week should readily be able to identify the epistemological fallacy so glaring in the arguments of zero growthers like Handler and Meadows--namely that the entire negentropic evolution of the universe including the human species completely refutes any notion of equilibrium of entropy, i.e. there are no limits to resources as long as creative human beings are involved in redefining them. Dennis Meadows' simple-minded "limits to growth" thesis is nothing more than a razmataz computer extrapolating the past into the future as though human beings were incapable of redefining the entire process. If Meadows had his computer in the early 1800's and analyzed the rate of increase in use of horse drawn carriages, then surely he would have predicted an early 1900's doomsday as the entire urban population drowned in manure.

Meanwhile, in the real world, serious attention is turning to the USLP and the European Labor Committees programmatic thrust for crash development of fusion power and a world reconstruction program based on reconversion of auto to tractor production linked to expanded fertilizer production in the industrial sector for the rapid capital intensive development of the fertile Ganges-Brahmaputra River basin of Bangladesh and India, the Rio de la Plata area of Brazil, and what was once the "fertile crescent" in the Mid East. This would increase world grain production several-fold and lay the basis for eliminating starvation and malnutrition worldwide in 5-10 years.

Iraq, picking up on the USLP/ELC program has this past week offered $35 billion to the U.S. and to undercut the phony Rockefeller/Shah of Iran oil prices, provided the U.S. utilize idle capacity to produce agricultural equipment necessary for the real development of the Mid East. This, coinciding with the USLP's Emergency Agricultural Production Act (EAPA) now before Congress, lays the basis for immediately stopping the anticipated 100 million deaths by starvation this year. It further lays the basis for expanding development whereby vast numbers of the world's population can become productive, creative human beings contributing to expansion of living standards throughout the world. Serious scientists and students are joining with us in working out the solutions for expanded human development in this expanding universe.

Bell's letter commented that his pro-genocide statements should be considered sane now that the "distinguished" President of the National Academy of Sciences had espoused them. The argument is more easily made that this merely demonstrates the level to which the Academy has sunk. Before scientists began adjusting to depression grant cuts and Rockefeller Club of Rome propaganda, such quackery would have had no audience.

This week USLP candidate for President, Lyn La Rouche has offered to address a special joint session of Congress on the immediate necessary steps to expand the economy and restructure the collapsing monetary system. Congressmen contacted by our Washington office this week readily admitted Lyn's competence as the only economist in the world that has correctly predicted and interpreted the developments of the present depression from as early as 1957. Already he has been contacted by three Congressional Committees and Treasury Secretary "Simple" Simon has ordered ten copies of the USLP Brief on the Collapse of the Banking System.

While Bell, like Malthus before him, is busy blaming the depression on the existence of the human race, the USLP and the working class are preparing the next qualitative leap of mankind to a higher stage of development--join us.

How do you feel about the Belk Tower?

by ian larlee

I think it's OK. Nobody else has anything like it. The tower's sort of like the center of attraction, but that bell in the morning just tears me up. It's still a pretty nice place to spend some time.

James Forrest,
undecided major

I think it's a waste of money.

Ann Simpson,
Art History

I don't feel it has any value to the university; it's just a monument and I don't feel Belk did anything for UNCC.

Robert Goozner,
Math & Science

I think it represents a symbol to the university just like other schools have symbols.
