Nixon to become part of UNCC faculty and campus

By Luann Whitley
UNCC's political science department will welcome a new faculty member next year as Richard M. Nixon joins the staff. The faculty feels confident that Nixon will do an adequate job lecturing the students. Nixon will specialize in "government strategy" and will use his own published "Memoirs" as a textbook. "By using my own book for reference, I feel I will be able to make everything perfectly clear," Nixon said.

The multi-talented Nixon will lend his services to the English department, since he is a published author. He will also help out in the Learning Resources Center. "I will mainly work with students interested in audio techniques, such as placement of microphones to receive the best reception and taping procedures," Nixon said.

Dick Nixon arrives at Douglas airport to begin his first day of classes as a UNCC professor.

The student government at UNCC has received a request from Nixon in which he begs to be considered as a faculty advisor to the Student Legislature. Present Student Legislature members refused to comment on their decision. Nixon also wants to make himself available to do lectures for the psychology department, particularly on the topic of abnormal psychology.

While at UNCC, Nixon and his wife Pat, will reside in downtown Charlotte at the old Mecklenburg Hotel. The old Hotel, originally to be destroyed, was recently purchased by the Nixons. "The Hotel will be ideal for us. Pat and I are used to a lot of rooms. It is in the best location for Pat since she likes to wander aimlessly up and down city streets," Nixon said.

Nixon had many offers for jobs but decided on UNCC because he liked the apathy on campus. He is also excited about living so close to Carowinds.

The Nixons plan to move in the Mecklenburg Hotel during July. The move will not take place until the hotel is painted white and columns are added.

Beginning today, students will be able to purchase Coke at the candy counter. Four line limit please.

Bookstore contest allows legal shoplifting for two lucky students

By Luann Whitley
The UNCC Bookstore has devised a contest to be held starting April 16-20. The winners of the contest will be given a "five minute shopping spree" in the Bookstore at the beginning of the 1979 fall semester. A Bookstore spokesperson said, "We are having the contest in order to give two students an opportunity to get their books, supplies and UNCC T-shirts for free." Also, we feel this is a good promotion stunt for the Bookstore. "The main rule for the contest is you must be an enrolled student for the 1979 Fall semester at UNCC. This automatically will eliminate the present senior class from the competition," said the spokesperson.

Entry procedures are as follows: to enter, you must send a postcard into the UNCC Bookstore stating in 25 words what you think the Bookstore could do to prevent the long lines during the beginning of each semester. Also, you must include your address and please specify whether you are a commuter student or a resident on campus, because on commuter and one resident student will be chosen as winners. Entries will be judged on originality, creativity and practicality. The judges have been chosen from a group of interested alumni whose names will be withheld.

"Everyone is looking forward to seeing what kind of participation and interest we receive. The postcards must be mailed into the Bookstore, you cannot just drop an entry by the store, they will not be accepted," the spokesperson said.

One catch to the contest is that during the "shopping spree" the textbooks will not be sectioned off into departments. The winners will literally have to search for the books that they need. Entries for the contest will not be accepted after 3 p.m. on April 20. The winners will be announced on April 25. There will not be a limit on the amount of merchandise a winner can take. "Whatever the winners can grab within the five minute time limit, they can keep," said the spokesperson.

Newspaper at top of threat list in poll

By Bill Whittaker
The UNCC Security Office has been investigating a series of bomb threats affecting numerous campus institutions. So far only three bombs have been found of the 72 announced threats. Jerry Hudson, heading the investigation, remarked, "We know who did it, but we can't touch them due to a loophole in the University Charter."

Hudson explained the sequence of events, "Three weeks ago the Carolina Journal received a threat, which caused the office to be evacuated. The nursing department took credit for the threat. Two days later, a legislator found a note in his lunch box which informed him of a bomb to be placed in the student government office. The administration of UNCC claimed credit for that bomb. That same day, the Carolina Journal editorial board phoned a threat to the student fees committee, who wrote a threat to Larry Springs. Springs, I hear just raised his eyes and said "thank God."

The next week there were more threats, the legislature threatening the Carolina Journal, the BSU threatened the nursing department. The other BSU threatened the Carolina Journal for not making it clear which BSU was meant in the former threat.

The thing kept accelerating, we thought about calling for an arms limitation treaty, but my office received a threat from the Commuter Association. This effectively cancelled any hopes of a cease-fire, whereupon I phoned a threat to the engineering department. I don't know why, but later I received a threat from the PLO.

This past week more threats were made. The more active organizations were the administration, the nursing department and the Carolina Journal, the legislature dragged a little for they were undergoing internal strife and were threatening each other.

The results after three weeks are:

Threats received Carolina Journal 18, nursing department 15, Student Legislature 8, administration 7, PFM 7 student fees committee 6, UPB 5, engineering 2, commuter association 1, Jesse Helms 1, Anita Bryant 1, and posthumously Chariman Mao 1.

Threats made; Carolina Journal 33, nursing department 17, Student Legislature 10, administration 1, PLO 4, city of Charlotte 2, United States Senate 1 and posthumously, Albert Einstein 1.
