

Injunction keeps legislators from being sworn into office

By Bill Peschel

Two weeks after the student body elections, the 15th assembly of the Student Legislature would have ended and the members of the 16th sworn in. But an injunction from the Student Superior Court halted the swearing in of all elected officials. No one knows how long this will last.

The injunction came at the request of Alex Pearce. Pearce, recently elected senior class president, joins the list of other candidates for class presidents in protesting the way the Election and Publicity Staff handled the election. Pearce is asking, if results for class presidents are held invalid, all results, except for the constitution, could be affected by that and they must be invalidated also.

Even so, little was done in the third meeting before the end of the semester. Several more budget requests were approved: National Art Education Association for $1,675.80, Wildlife Club for $1,324 and Circle K for $1,055.50. These budgets increase the amount the legislature is asking the Student Activity Fees Commission (SAFC) for to over $72,000. If SAFC gives the legislature less than requested, the body must then start slashing budgets.

Pearce ran into trouble trying to get the body to pay a bill. The bill is for $130 and covers the Bella Abzug dinner. After the bill could not be paid out of the president's discretionary fund, Pearce tried to get it paid out of the legislature's buffer zone. With no debate, the vote was 11-5-6 (one vote short of passage).

Tom Chumley's resignation from his post as co-chairperson of Elections and Publicity Staff was announced. He recommended the other co-chairperson Cathy Allred as his replacement.

In an article last week's Carolina Journal, Angelo Robinson's name was incorrectly spelled.

SPEAK UP

By Bob Henderson

Do you think the recent energy shortage is for real or just another hoax by the oil companies to hike the prices of their products?

I think there is a lot of gasoline on hand. It's just not being distributed so the prices will go up.

I think the energy shortage is a hoax because we have so many other forms of energy available.

Circle K holds annual convention

By Suzanne Fritts

Ever find yourself asking "Circle what?" It is Circle K and it is here to stay. In order to clear up the erroneous conception it is a "Horse Lover's Club," look at what it really is. Circle K, sponsored by the Kiwanis International, is a social and service organization for college students all across the US. There is a local club on campus. As proof of this "involvement," here is an eyewitness account of the weekend of all weekends for Circle K persons in the Carolinas: Convention '79.

The 18th annual Carolinas District Convention was held at the Holiday Inn North this past weekend. Caucuses, speakers, seminars and food comprised the action-packed event. No doubt the climax of the festive occasion was on Sunday when the awards were presented to the most deserving clubs. Now you may ask, "Who, exactly, qualifies to be a 'most deserving club'?" The figures speak for themselves. Your own 49er Circle K walked away with three of the most coveted awards. Among these was the Most Improved Club Award based on overall improvement over the past year.

Secondly, the 49ers hauled off the Annual Achievement Award which entails all of the club's activities over the past year. In other words, not only did we improve the most but we did one "bang-up" job getting there. And like any other "exceptional group" who has ever "made it big," somewhere a motivation must exist. This motivation (alias David Henderson) iced the cake as he so deservedly received the Outstanding Club President Award. Taking into consideration clubs from both North and South Carolina were eligible to win these awards, it is quite an accomplishment for UNCC.

Circle K is the story of a growing, thriving club whose purpose is to serve others through campus and community involvement. Yet the best thing about Circle K is this: There's always room for you.

I think if we were more careful about how we use energy there would not be a problem. It can be resolved; it's not such a big deal.

I think right now there is not a problem but if we keep saying it's just a hoax, one day there will really be a big problem. We can't just ignore it.

Peggy Parton

I think it is probably a big hoax because they know we need the oil and will pay more for it.

I think we are getting the short end of the deal although I am somewhat confused by the issue.
