

A Four Year Constitution For A Four Year School

The new constitution is finally here. The constitution was obviously needed and automatically forth coming. A referendum vote will be held April 8-9. This document is a possible solution to the efficiency problem in the Student Government Association. It separates the Student Government Association into Executive, Legislative, and the new Judiciary which is a means of internal checks and balances.

The impeachment process is designated and outlined. Now there can be no excuse for incomplete representatives among the Legislative and Executive Council. Students, this is the statement of impeachment proceedings—read it carefully.

Last year the Constitution had to be amended to allow for the election of Junior Class Officers and Representatives; therefore, for a new senior institution, a four year college, automatically a new constitution is necessary.

The Judiciary Article creates a court to decide upon the rules and regulations made by the Legislature. This is not for rules concerning the campus grounds. This constitution is up-to-date and provides a firm foundation for the SGA to begin plans for a new year. Scrutinize this constitution and give your vote towards a more efficient Student Government Association.

Letter To The Editor:

What is the purpose of the Student Council?

This 'hallowed' body is supposed to operate under the constitution of Charlotte College as a representative agent of the students. But this is completely false in action.

Our student council is a curious animal. It wants power over all organizations in order to stamp them official agents. The Student Council also wants this power over such organs of the student body as the Collegian and Si Si. These time honored arms of and agents for the student—we are paying for them—should be free of student government. Some of the Council either want to or tend to represent groups or factions rather than the students. Whatever power the Student Council has, some members seem to want more. Too many of them do not know what or how to use what little power they already possess. The main problem is that some of the members go to the administration without due consideration for the students.

This organ, which at times is rather malignant, tends to by-pass the important issues on campus and scream, rant and rave over issues which have no value. These minor fights tend to turn into personality conflicts. An example of this is the 45 minute squabble over whether the student council should and would have a telephone. Yet the council hastily passed two measures without due consideration for the true essence of the programs.

The first point which the council should have considered was the recognition of the funds for The Literary Club. They assumed from the scanny report presented by the President that there would only be one issue this spring of the Parnasian. They closed the possibility for more than one issue under the funds provided. This measure should have been presented by a member of the literary club for complete information. This points to the need for knowledge, complete, of our members.

The second point was the passing of $75.00 appropriation for W.U.S. without recommendation of the student body, whom they are supposedly representing. I personally do not believe that the Student Council has the right to spend money as some have said "... for unity

Letter To The Editor:

I want, in an atmosphere of recriminations and criticism, to compliment the staff of our library on an excellent job of setting up and running their organization. The Library, in case anyone hasn't noticed, has grown by leaps and bounds since it served as our College union, in the dark days prior to that institution's advent. The Big Move from the Kennedy Building to the newly-erected Library came last summer during Second Summer Session. I couldn't help but admire a really sharp outfit at work, even though I was not in school at the time, and got only a glimpse of the operation. But, not only was the entire Library moved in a very short time and set up ready for action in an astoundingly short time, but the Library Staff also kept their individual composure during the process. I am no easy customer over there, but I'm impressed at the courtesy and efficiency of the Staff, whenever I have a special request to make. These people, under the guiding whiphand of Mrs. Mosselle Scherger, have done a job to make anyone proud. Ladies (and gentlemen), I thank you, and I hope others will do the same.

FLAGGART TAKES BREATH

The Honorable Reginald M. Flaggart took a breather from his rigorous Presidential campaign yesterday to rest at his family home in Juarez, Mexico. He allowed yours truly to visit him and to obtain the exclusive interview which follows.

Mr. Flaggart, I'm very grateful to you for allowing me to visit you.

That's perfectly natural for a humble boy like you to be grateful to a kind friend of the people like me. I invited you here because you write articles which are favorable to me. I liked the way you wrote that I spoke with compassion, as if I were calling to a lost and homesick sailor, when all the other writers said I had a voice like a fog horn.

Thank you, Your Honor. Does this mean that if you are elected you will consider granting me a position as your press secretary?

Well I don't know son. How much is the job worth to you?

To change the subject, I suppose you plan to spend your Presidential vacations here in Juarez. Don't you think this may offend the American people?

I don't think so. I'll time my vacations to coincide with those of the Mexican president, who takes his vacations in the United States. If a crisis arises while I'm gone, the American people can call on him.

Since you're not married, does this mean that the country would have no First Lady during your administration?

On the contrary. With the divorce laws here in Mexico, the country may have three or four First Ladies during my administration. It all depends on how I feel.

Mr. Flaggart, your critics state that you know little about world affairs. Is this true, sir?

It most certainly is not. I'll have you know that I am better informed on the Viet Nam Canal crisis and the war in Panama than anyone else in the country.

Are you in favor of medical care for the aged?

Yes, and I also think that young people should have medical care when they are in need of it.

Is there anything that you want me to tell the American people for you, sir?

Tell the people of the United States that their invincible champion of justice will return soon. While you're at it, tell them that I will be back in the near future also.

THE BEST

No medical evidence or scientific endorsement has proved any other cigarette to be superior to Bent. That is a clear, simple fact. Let's repeat it. No medical evidence or scientific endorsement has proved any other cigarette to be superior to Bent.

If no other cigarette is superior to Bent, then Bent must be the best. This means that Bent does everything a cigarette is supposed to do, and does it better than any other cigarette. Therefore, Bent will give you a worse case of lung cancer than any other cigarette. Smoke Bent, with the micronite filter.

TALK ABOUT RAZOR BLADES

There's been a lot of talk about razor blades lately. I wonder if you've heard these new blade commercials.

"With only one Curseonna blade, I shaved by beard, head, arms, legs, chest, and eyebrows. Then, when I looked in the mirror, I used the same blade to slash my wrists."

"I got 43 shaves with one Curseonna blade. I would have gotten more, but, as I was removing it from the razor, it slipped from my hands, fell on my wife's diamond ring, and cut the stone in half. That dulled it somewhat."

"With the Curseonna I got 923 shaves as opposed to 754 with the blip and 519 with the blip. I'm going to use the money I saved on blades to have plastic surgery done on my face."

"After shaving with the new Curseonna, I'll never go back to using broken bottles."

"My group of Atlanta barbers got far more shaves with the Curseonna than the group which used the blip blade. I don't know if there's any connection or not, but my group had 31% fewer cavities, too."

Roger Maris says, "The new Curseonna is the only blade for me. I got three times as many shaves with it as I got with the blip or the blip. And, by the way, a Curseonna blade shaves much closer if you don't have greasy kid stuff in your beard."

"... and if you're not completely satisfied with the new Curseonna blade, we'll buy you a package of blip, or blip, or whatever blade you think is better, blip blip it!"

IN CLOSING

In closing I would like to leave you with the words spoken by Sonny Liston just prior to the first round of his last fight. "Yon Cassius has a lean and hungry look. Such men are dangerous."

dear boss

dear boss
a moth eaten parable
i bring you here
to bring you a word
of despondent cheer

i once knew two moths
who flirted with flame
again and again
but differently

one moth knew all
or so he said
about fire and flame
he knew it was warm
and deadly
and it made
an interesting game
but never too close
would he fly to the flame
for then he was sure
that poof
he would die
besides
he already knew all
so why should he fly
into flame
and die
question mark
for knowledge
question mark
ha ha he would say
he knew all
already
and so
needed none

the other moth said
he would rather be dead
than know all
for then there would be nothing
to learn

sad
but noble
said the other moth
derisively
as he flew
around the flame
safely

the noble moth died
fried
alive
and lived

the other simply
existed
embroiled
in his ignorance
dead
for all eternity

Preyer Gains Support Among C C Students

Submitting a constitution to the Charter Committee chairman at the Student Council meeting of March 16, 1964, the Charlotte College Students for Preyer were granted temporary sanction to operate as an official college club until its constitution could be examined by the Charter Committee before the April 6th Student Council meeting. A few of Charlotte College's politically-minded students, unable to work through the CCYDC, thus formed an organization in which they can actively campaign for Judge L. Richardson Preyer's candidacy for Democratic Governor of North Carolina.

The objective of CCSP is to inform college students in the Charlotte area through personal contact, publicity, and written information of Judge L. Richardson Preyer's campaign for Governor of North Carolina. Students for Preyer is the first state-wide student organization to support a candidate for Governor of North Carolina. It will work closely with the Young Adults for Preyer, a group which is headed by Art Weiner of Greensboro. Three students from North Carolina colleges will direct the Students for Preyer campaign, they are: Charles Shaffer, basketball and tennis star at U.N.C.; John Bynum, student body president at North Carolina State; and Kitty Bernhardt, editor of the annual at Wake Forest College.

Working with the state and local "Students for Preyer" organizations, the Charlotte College chapter is among the first in the state to become organized on a college campus.

The chairman of CC's Students for Preyer is Bill Queen. Bill was appointed by the Western District College Students for Preyer Chairman, Gene Horne, a student at CC. Bill then appointed Tom Meacham to become his Vice-Chairman and Mr. Jackson of the Political Science Department volunteered to advise the organization.

For the past several weekends, Charlotte College Students for Preyer have helped the local organizations in distributing pamphlets, bumper stickers, and campaign buttons at Charlotte's shopping centers. The CC organization, particularly, has staffed Cotswold Shopping Center, Charlottetown Mall, and Park Road Shopping Center.
