If this is a true statement by all odds the preferable one is that Mr. Joseph C. Mills as his successor. the negroes must migrate. Either condition would be accepted before amalgamation. This is a grave and serious question, in the solution of which every thinking white person is more or less interested. Unfortunately we are so accustomed to the existing conditions that its importance is not appreciated. The changes and conditions which are surely forcing us nearer to a solution of this problem are of such slow operation that we are not conscious of it, and await calmly and with a seeming know and cannot forecast.
