The following from the Salisbury Herald: "Some time since the Concord Standard published an article charging the R. & D. railroad with breaking faith with the people along the line of the Yadkin road, and had removed the side tracks from stations where they had been promised. We copied this article and commented upon it. Dr. I. W. Coleman, of Rockwell, was in to see us last Thursday and told us that the Standard was not correct in its charges. No stations on the Yadkin road had been discontinued and none would be. When the road was completed to Norwood a small quantity of rails were lacking in order to finish laying the track. No rails being on hand the railroad temporarily removed a part of the rails from the side-track at Peeler's in order to supply immediate want's. There was no intention to discontinue the station or to permanently remove the side-track. On the contrary only a small part of the iron was taken, all of which has been replaced, and trains are stopping there every day. In addition to this a shelter will be built for the accommodation of passengers going to Misenheimer's Springs, and as soon as the needs of the place demand it a comfortable depot will be erected. The article was unjust to the railroad and by no means true. Having published it, with comments of our own, we take pleasure in making all necessary correction and explaining how the error occurred."

The Standard published just such information as one of the best citizens in that community conveyed to us. If it is a mistake and the feelings of the little road are hurt, we take it all back and ask a full and unconditioned pardon.

AFFAIRS IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

It seems just now that Gov. Tillman is not in it—the hearts of the people. The character of his administration has sorely disappointed those who gave him a hearty and enthusiastic support.

It appears that the credit of the State is anything but good. The authorities can get no credit. They are confronted with this reason: "You exact a law one day, and repeal it the next; we have no confidence in your stability."

Gov. Tillman has rendered himself very unpopular with the great movement that took him to the gubernatorial chair, thereby hoping for relief. He has done this by not properly grasping the situation; he has done this by being equal to the great duties before him; he has done this by advocating reforms that he could not possibly effect, and he has done this by advocating things on the stump that he disregarded afterwards.

Chief among the complaints going up from his former friends, is the fact that Gov. Tillman denounced in unmerciful terms public officials accepting free passes. Gov. Tillman has accepted a free pass and explains, in a letter to Capt. McBee, his course: "I have changed my mind; I think a free pass is too small a thing to influence my actions, therefore I except it with thanks."

It is the inconsistency of Gov. Tillman's course that has lost him the warmth and strength of the friendship that followed him through one of the most heated campaigns ever known in the South.
