Mr. J. F Anderson, traveling sales- man for the Charlotte Oil and Fer- tilizer Company, has recently re- turned from a Northern trip. On the Richmond and Danville train coming south, he became engaged in conversation, this side of Alexandria, with a very agreeable gentleman from Mansfield, Mass., who held a ticket to New Orleans and who talked in- telligently upon a variety of subjects. Presently the stranger observed that he had left his horse tied out and believed he would go back and get him. Mr. Anderson was struck with surprise and first thought the man had been drinking and that he was just detecting the fact, but the man kept rambling on about his horse, which he said was a young one which he had broken himself and had owned for 30 years, and finally proposed that they get out and stretch their legs. Suiting the action to the words, he got up as if to leave the car, but was detained. By this time it was manifest that the stranger had become insane. Taking a seat, accompanied by our polite and ac- commodating friend, J P Cook, edi- tor of the Standard, we were whirled along to the point of destination, which was the home of our long time friend, Capt. J M Odell, who was at home at the time though of course, exceedingly busy, as his son, Mr. Will R Odell, was absent in New York. The two nights of our stay in Concord were spent at the home of Mr. R W Allison, an intelligent and remarkably well preserved gentle- man of S3 years. Mr. Allison was a member of the State Convention	Twin-City Sentinel. At the Friday afternoon session of the Baptist State Sunday School Convention, President Winston, of the University, was present. He was called upon to address the con- vention but asked to be excused. Several members of the convention insisted that Mr. Winston make a few remarks, and he addresed the convention briefly. Among other things he said that he did not attend Sunday school himself and did not believe in forcing children to attend Sunday school or in using compul- sion in anything. He said that he had one boy who attended Sunday school and another who did not, both following their own inclina- tions. This was not very enthusiastically received and there was much quiet talk about it among the delegates, though nothing was said about the remarks in the convention. The Standard has its own way of calculating the majority. If "In- spector" will think a little, he'll see that he is wrong. By very dint of the requirement of the majority to carry the measure, all those who did not vote are counted against the measure. Counting the votes polled and not polled the majority is 216, but that is not the question. "In- spector" knows that 281 ballots were required to even put the meas- ure "in the ring" and all votes cast above that is simply a majority. Death has visited this congregation (New Bethel) again. A short time ago a dear little darling, Daniel Lee Ritchie, infant son of D. D. and F A V Ritchie was lain to rest. God permitted it to live upon earth but a short time, and then took it to live with with Him in Heaven, be- fore it had even become tainted with sin. While the grave was being filled up over this one, the pastor, as he ,looked over the congregation, and thought, "Who will be the next." Early on the morning of the 11th inst., the sad news came, that the next is passing away. Hurrying to the bedside we found it true. This time it was not an old decrepit one, nor one so tender in years as the former, but a promising young man, who was becoming more and more active in all good works. EDITOR STANDARD: — Reading your timely article of last week, "Let us Keep Cool," suggested the thought that it would not be amiss for a Democrat (who had never belted or scratched a nominee) to give his idea of who is entitled to participate in the primaries. The county Executive Committee has made the call for the 7th of May. Now I don't know to what class of the Democratic party they belong to, but ain't it recorded in the memory of the voters of each precinct wheth- er they have been in the habit of bolting or kicking to the nominee.
