

IN A NUTSHELL.

The speeches delivered by Mr. Carlisle last week at Covington were unanswerable arguments against the free and unlimited coinage of silver...

With his remarkable power of statement, Mr. Carlisle has put the matter so clearly and so simply that any person of ordinary intelligence can understand and appreciate what he says.

His speech at Bowling Green contained five short sentences which give the situation in a nutshell. We print them under the caption of "Currency Facts" in this issue.

GRESHAM'S SUCCESSOR.

The Washington Post says that the opinion is quite generally entertained in official circles that Attorney General Olney will be appointed to the vacant Secretaryship of State.

His knowledge of pending international questions, with which he has no little to do as the adviser of President Cleveland and Secretary Gresham, at once suggests him as a man fitted for the important portfolio, and a high official last night said he regarded the appointment of Mr. Olney to the Secretaryship as a foregone conclusion.

He said that the Attorney General had been consulted at every step almost in the diplomatic negotiations of the present administration; and was thoroughly familiar with all phases of the questions yet to be settled.

If Mr. Olney should become secretary of State it is considered quite likely that another New Yorker will be called into the Cabinet in the person of the distinguished lawyer, Mr. J. C. Carter, who, it is said, would accept the Attorney Generalship for the remaining two years of Mr. Cleveland's term.—Kaleigh News & Observer.

For Over Fifty Years.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhoea.

A Judge's General Jail Delivery. Jacksonville, Fla., May 30.—Judge Cromwell Gibbons, of the City Criminal court, to-day ordered the release of all prisoners serving sentences in the county jail for carrying concealed weapons or shooting at another. This is because Governor Mitchell yesterday set aside the sentences imposed on Banker Marvin for a like offense.

England Acts Promptly. London, May 31.—Three British warships have been ordered to Jiddah, the seaport of Mecca, with orders to investigate the circumstances of the killing of the British vice consul at that place and the wounding of the British consul, the Russian consul and the French consular secretary by a band of Bedouins and also to protect the lives and property of foreigners.

A sudden Death. Prof. O. L. T. Fisher, of Mt. Amosa Seminary, lost his fine bay horse this (Saturday) noon. His team was sent to this city to meet the 11 o'clock train and on his arrival at Mt. Pleasant returning the horse took suddenly sick and died. It was a fine steed, valued at about $160.

Seventeen Year Locusts. Des Moines, Ia., May 30.—Farmers in the central part of the State are much alarmed over the discovery of small swarms of seventeen year locusts. They are similar to the locusts which devastated the western country seventeen years ago.

TRAMPED BY A HORSE.

A Frightened Animal Dashes Into a Crowd of Children. Philadelphia, May 31.—The most terrifying and exciting runaway that has ever occurred in Philadelphia took place this afternoon during a flag raising at the Emerald primary school, on Emerald street above Susquehanna avenue.

The exercises incident to the flag raising attracted about 2,000 people to the front of the school. A stand had been erected on the pavement, on which were gentlemen taking part in the ceremonies. The children of the school were grouped in a semicircle around the stand, and the balance of the crowd were packed in the street behind the children.

Suddenly a terrific cry came from the people on the edge of the crowd and there was a wild rush for safety. Tearing down upon the crowd at the top of its speed was a horse with a boy upon its back. The people opened and scattered as best they could to give the frightened animal the highway, but the crowd was too dense to get out of the way in time, and the horse plunged into the midst of the children grouped around in the crowd.

The shrieks of the little ones as they were trampled under foot and the screams of their agonized parents were heartrending. Just in front of the stand the horse stumbled and fell over the prostrate bodies of the children that had been beaten to the street. Before the animal could arise a dozen men had thrown themselves upon him and held him until he became quiet.

The greatest confusion followed. The frightened parents of the children and the onlookers gathered up and carried away the children that had been hurt. The majority of those injured were suffering from cuts and bruises and how badly many of them were hurt it is impossible to say, as they were taken directly to their homes. The names of nineteen children who have been cut and bruised by the horse's hoofs were obtained by the police.

Jacob Ernest, the boy who was riding the horse, and was thrown when the animal fell, had his arm broken and was taken to the hospital, and Mrs. William Rogers, the wife of a director of the school, had her ankle broken. Ernest had had the horse in a blacksmith shop being shod and just as he mounted him the animal took fright and ran away.

MEMORIAL DAY.

The Davis Plot in Hollywood Richly Decorated—A Handsome Flag From Richmond.

Richmond, Va., May 30.—At Hollywood Memorial Day was observed today more generally than for some years. Business was pretty well suspended, the State and municipal offices were closed, and there was a procession to Hollywood cemetery composed of the military, veterans, children's brigade, and the Ladies' Memorial Association. The graves of the Confederate veterans were profusely decorated with flowers in the morning by the ladies, and the evening exercises consisted of an address by Rev. Frank Stringfellow, prayer by Rev. Dr. M. D. Hoge, and a wonderfully painted by Verestchagin, is, perhaps, the most realistic sight in Jerusalem today.

In a small, paved, oblong, unroofed enclosure, some 75 by 80 feet in extent, and in a most inaccessible portion of the town, is the mass of ancient masonry, which is generally accepted as having been a portion of the outside of the actual wall of the temple itself.

Against these rough stones every day of the week, but especially on Friday, and at all times of the day are seen Hebrews of all countries and of all ages, of both sexes, rich and poor alike, weeping and bewailing the desolation which has come upon them, and upon the city of their former glory.

Whatever may be their faith, it is beautiful and sincere; and their grief is actual and without dissimulation. They kiss the walls, and beat their breasts, and tear their hair, and rend their garments, and the real tears they shed come from their hearts and their souls, as well as from their eyes.

They ask for no backsheeh; they pay no attention to the curious and inquisitive heretics and Gentiles, who pity while they wonder at them. They read the Lamentations of Jeremiah and the mournful words of Isaiah; they wait for the days that are gone, and they pray for the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob, that they may get their own again.—Philadelphia Item.

JERUSALEM'S SURPRISES.

A City Where There is no Birth Nor Cheerful Life. The altitude of Jerusalem is always a surprise to the visitor who comes here for the first time.

He knows, of course, that it is a mountain city, and that it was built upon Mount Zion and Mount Moriah; but he does not realize until he makes the gradual ascent that it is 2,600 feet above the level of the Mediterranean, and nearly 4,000 feet above the surface of the Dead Sea.

As high on one side as the Catalk Mountain House; as high on the other as the crater of Mount Vesuvius.

Jerusalem is a city of surprises. It is, apart from its sacred association, an intensely interesting spot even to travelers who are already saturated with the hitherto and unfamiliar and surprising charms of Cairo, Athens and Constantinople.

Its size can best be expressed by the statement that the journey around about the outside of its walls may be made by an ordinarily rapid walker in the space of an hour.

Its houses are small, irregular in shape, equal and mean.

Its streets, if streets they be called, are not named or numbered; they are never cleaned, and in many instances steep, crooked, narrow, roughly paved, they are vaulted over by the buildings on each side of them.

Never a pair of wheels traverse them, and rarely is a horse or donkey seen within the walls.

The halt, the maimed and the blind, the leprosy, and the wretchedly poor, form the great bulk of the population of Jerusalem, and, with a single exception of the Hebrews, they are persistent and clamorous beggars.

Trade and commerce seem to be confined to the bare necessities of life, and to dealers in beads and crucifixes. There is but one hotel, and that is not a good hotel, within its walls; and one Turkish merchant, who displays in his little windowless, doorless shop, a small assortment of silver charms, trinkets and bric-a-brac to the gaze of the passer-by, is almost the only vendor of anything like luxuries in the place.

His customers, of course, are the pilgrims who come to see, and not to worship.

Jerusalem is unique as a city in which everything is serious and solemn and serene.

It has no clubs, no barrooms, no beer gardens, no concert halls, no theaters, no lecture rooms, no places of amusement of any kind, no street bands, no wandering musicians, no wealthy or upper classes, no mayor, no aldermen, no newspapers, no printing presses, no book stores—except one outside the walls, for the sale of Bibles—no cheerfulness, no life.

The Jews, it is said, form almost two-thirds of the population of the city. They occupy a section which covers a greater part of the eastward slope of Zion, and the Jewish quarter is the most wretched in the whole wretched town. Its inhabitants are quiet and subdued in bearing; they make no claim of their hereditary rights to the royal city of their Kings; they simply and silently and patiently wait.

The Waiting Wall of the Jews, so wonderfully painted by Verestchagin, is, perhaps, the most realistic sight in Jerusalem today.

In a small, paved, oblong, unroofed enclosure, some 75 by 80 feet in extent, and in a most inaccessible portion of the town, is the mass of ancient masonry, which is generally accepted as having been a portion of the outside of the actual wall of the temple itself.

In Tornadoes.

Those living in portions of our country exposed to tornadoes will be glad to know that scientists tell us there is always warning of the approach of a tornado to those that are observant.

Clouds may be seen hurrying together in the southwest and west, a low dull roar of the wind in those clouds may be perceived, while there is a great stillness and sultry heat in the air, all of which signs are sufficient to bid people look for safety.

This safety they will never find in any easterly direction. One who faces the cloud as it comes should seek safety to the right. The only absolute safety, however, is to be found underground, in the cellar of the house, if it is a wooden house, as the storm will whirl off the beams and boards of the structure, but if it is a brick or stone house the chattered walls will only tumble in, the brick or stone house, moreover, will fall sooner than the wooden one, which yields and gives.

In the tornado countries, especially in the more open portions, there should be an underground place provided for refuge, with its roof arched and strengthened by masonry and beams so that it cannot be broken in by falling heavy falling upon it.—Harper's Bazar.

Cookery Teaching in England. The London News says the number of women who go about the country giving cookery lectures is constantly increasing.

In England these teachers are fairly paid. In the county council work the teacher has to drive a considerable distance five days in the week, and back again at night, often in an open conveyance, so that women who are not physically strong are foolish to undertake the duty.

Occasionally three demonstration lessons have to be given in one day, which means about six hours' working and talking. Many of the teachers are quite girls, and it has been remarked that the village mothers to whom the lectures show but little faith in them, resting more confidently upon the assertions of older lecturers.

There are many new lights to be thrown upon domestic cookery, and these are apt to be smiled upon with pitying superiority when shown by a girl.

About Collars. The exponents of high art in dress condemn the high, stiff collar, which they say robs the neck of perfect freedom of motion, destroying the natural expression and grace.

The neck is to the head what the stem is to the flower. They consider even an unbecoming neck freed better than the stiffly bridled carriage, which is the product of the tailor coat. The soft frill of lace that has encircled the throats of the heroines in English novels since the beginning is restricted for the aesthetic maiden, while the tailor-made girl will still cling to her "chokers," Princess of Wales "dog collars," etc.

Winter Dangers of Childhood. An idea prevails that winter weather is beneficial to young children. If the temperature be below freezing point the more dangerous it is for the child's health.

The colder and drier the air gets, no matter whether the skin is kept warm or not; the cold, dry air irritates the respiratory organs and it is apt to cause inflammation. This is the more dangerous the younger the child is. Cold, damp weather, with or without rain, when the temperature is above freezing point, is much less to be feared if the child be sufficiently well wrapped.

St. Vitus' Dance. Parents should keep in mind the fact that twitching of the eyelids, of the mouth, and other involuntary movements of the muscles, as in St. Vitus' dance, may easily be acquired by imitation. It is therefore dangerous for children to associate with victims of any such infirmities of the nervous system.

Engaged Couples in France. After a girl has passed her eighteenth birthday she is thought to be no longer a minor, but it is considered bad taste for the parents themselves to make any effort to achieve a daughter's marriage.

Young men, except in the country, where far greater liberty is allowed, are seldom asked to visit a family where there are grown up daughters and, unless under rare circumstances, are never asked to come to lunch or dinner. On no account would a French mother allow her daughter to speak to a man of known bad character or obviously unfit to become her husband.

Marriage is an ever present possibility in France where young people are concerned, and, as may be easily imagined, this has both its advantages and disadvantages. None of these rules apply to near relations. Abroad families see a great deal of one another and cousins hardly ever develop into husbands and wives.

Probably because they are allowed to see so much of their young cousins.
