ON THE GROUNDS

Where Nearly Forty Years Ago Shot and Shell were Hurled at Those Who Are Now Enjoying the Grand Reunion.

Editorial Correspondence.

Charleston, S. C., May 9, 8:15 p. m.—Camp 212 arrived without event, gay and jolly, all heads level. Yes, there were sweet; Sheriff Pook, G. F. Walter, S. W. White and Daniel Stiller got relieved of surplus cash. The pickpockets failed on G. E. Ritchie.

The Confederates have captured Charleston for a fact and the city bows to the inevitable.

Vast arrangements are made and there are few privations. But it is night and we can see little of the city. We arrived at 5:50 but have been busy getting supper, etc. There has been some unavoidable confusion.

But the nocturnal shades have gathered upon us and the weary frames of the veterans are stretched out for a night's repose from which they have no fear of the "long roll" beat.

We think and think, what will Charleston reveal to us and what dreamy fancies that we have been entertaining will be realized and even surpassed. While thus we muse we take up the historic telescope and peer into the past and trace some of the steps by which the noble city has attained her proud heights.

We see the primitive forests as they are ranged by the bear, the wolf, the panther, the catamount and, little more, the savage red man, till 1670 there came a colony and took up their abode on the west bank of the Ashley river, but in 1780 it picked up and planted itself between the Ashley and Cooper rivers.

Many French Huguenots cast in their lots and Charleston was a growing, thriving settlement.

Her importance was felt in the Revolutionary War, for an English fleet of 50 vessels attacked it. Col. Moultrie had constructed, out of palmetto logs, the famous fort that bears his name and the English fleet found itself more than matched.

'Twas here and then that a British ball cut off the flag staff and the Stars and Stripes fell outside the wall, when the fearless Jasper sprang over, caught it up and hoisted it high. For this he was offered a commission but declined. The flag given by the Charleston women to the regiment was firmly held in his grasp when he fell at Savannah in 1779 when Gen. Lincoln and D'Ewango made that terrible but fruitless attack. This flag became the winding sheet of the lamented Jasper.

But Charleston fell into the hands of the British on May 12, 1780, after a four month's siege and the gallant Lincoln had to hand over his sword to Gen. Cornwallis, a humiliation stoned for when assigned by Gen. Washington to receive Cornwallis' sword on October 19th, 1781 at Yorktown, Va.

It was here in 1860 that that thorn in the flesh, negro slavery, formed a wedge that split the Democratic party and Stephen A. Douglas, with "Squatter Sovereignty plan," walked no more with his former political household. The results are well known. With two Democratic tickets, one Whig ticket and one Republican ticket, the anti-slavery or abolition party came into power. Secession followed. Here it took its birth and the ordinance was passed on December 21, 1860.

It was Charleston that first heard the crack and howlings of that terrible war when Gen. Beauregard commanded to fire at 4:30 o'clock Friday morning, April 12th, 1861. Could a canvas rise and stretch across Charleston bay with a panoramic picture of the grief and suffering that followed the echo of that shot, we would hide our faces from the scene and hide us homeward. But we are not here to see the dark side of the picture.

Robert E. Lee, famed for engineering skill in the Mexican war, set the defenses in order here before he took his place at the head of the army of Northern Virginia. His work told, and with Gen. Beauregard in command Charleston defied all the Federal naval hosts. Admiral Dupont with a fleet of ironclads attempted to dash past the forts as Farragut did in the Mississippi but found it more than a hornet's nest. The Klookuk was sunk and an officer, after getting out of the range, declared that the shots from the Confederate forts kept time with the ticks of his watch as they tailed upon his vessel. The "R-b" got the guns from the sunken ship. But Gen. Gilmore succeeded in getting Battery Wagoner. The enemy, too, had erected on a platform on driven piles the famous gun known as "The Swamp Angel," which hurled its shots five miles, landing them in the city. But joy to the Charlestonians, it burst at the 36th shot.

Many of the 8th regiment remember these stirring scenes when Fort Sumpter was reduced to a mere mass or pile of bricks which Major John Johnston, now Rector of an Episcopal church here, we believe, so manipulated as to make it still impregnable. What a defense that was at Charleston in the 60's, and it was only when Gen. Sherman approached it from the rear that it was evacuated on February 18, 1865.

But what was the war with all its horrors, drawing out four years, compared with the next and greatest of all events in her history, the seismic convulsions of August 31, 1886, when her 50,000 people were threatened with instant destruction.

Truly Charleston is rich in her collection of historic events. But there is a time for all things and Charleston has killed the fatted calf and has music and dancing now.

THE RALEIGH GREETED

Thousands Witness the Scene Amid the Hoisting of Cannon—The Roll of the Veterans from This Camp.

Charleston, May 10, 8 p. m.—The day has been fraught with intensity of emotion. The decorations are enormous and the enthusiasm is all that fancy can conceive.

It is doubtless known already that the Raleigh was grounded Tuesday evening. The reception, therefore, took place today.

The Colfax and the Wictoria went out and saluted the Raleigh at 9 a. m. Sumpter fired salutes and the grand old ship steamed slowly into the bay in graceful circle and rested about a half mile from the wharf. On the escort was the First Artillery band playing merrily, "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," "America," and other airs. Then the Naval Reserves on the battery fired 21 guns and dipped their flag when the Raleigh returned the salute of 21 shots. The Raleigh still has on her war paint and we felt that had Captain Coghlan and his men had on their fighting humor, it would be a pity for Charleston and her protegee.

The writer soon took passage on a row boat, and landing on the Raleigh, found Captain Coghlan, and was pleasantly received. By the way, when asked whether the Raleigh had fired the first gun in the great battle, he said no. On passing into the bay a battery fired on the Raleigh and she returned the fire. In this she fired the first shot in the campaign on the American side, but not the first shot in the battle of Manila. Perfect freedom was extended on the boat, as in the officers' quarters, and the writer had the exquisite satisfaction of seeing how the modern naval gun is manipulated, especially the operation of breech-loading; also the operation of the torpedo. An officer was asked whether the walls of the Raleigh would resist such shots as it sends. He answered not any more than a sheet of paper. The men on the ship took the keenest interest in visitors, and seemed to never tire at showing us answers questions. Capt. Coghlan and his officers are of course lionized here.

The program of the Raleigh of course delayed the exercises of Memorial Day till afternoon. This was brilliant in the march only. There was delay and worry in getting the procession in moving order. It took about three hours, to the wearing out of strength and patience of the old "Vets."

The formation was made along Meeting street and we passed up Hazel street, along King street, then down Calhoun street to Meeting street and through Marion Square, where we passed between Gen. Gordon on the right and the statue of John C. Calhoun on the left, then along King to Calhoun again to Rutledge to the auditorium, which seats about 7,000 people.

The grand old Go don could here be heard probably all over the immense hall but no one else. The occasion was literally crushed by its ponderous proportions.

The gathering along the line was amazing and it is estimated that 50,000 people were to be seen on and along the streets today.

This ends the first great day of the reunion.

The Confederate flags that had been in the battle we noted as follows: Eighth, 51st, 25th, 69th, N. C., together with that of the 1st N. C.

A DAY OF RECONNOITERING.

The View of Soldiers Laid Aside and the Day Taken Up in Viewing Charleston's Sites.

Editorial Correspondence.

Charleston, S. C., May 12.—Charleston is best seen in a bird's eye view from the dome of St. Michael's church, which costs you 10 cents and a climb as wearying and tedious as mounting fame's ladder is for the average man. It is compactly built with very, very narrow streets. Much of it is covered by good, fine buildings and we have at least not found the squalor and slums that we expected and that we suppose do exist.

The United States custom house, costing $3,000,000, we believe, is a marvel of beauty, durability and general grandeur.

The post office contains about as much beauty and magnificence as the mind can well conceive of.

The Catholic Cathedral was started to outstrip all the places of worship in the city, costing, we learn, more than $100,000 and is standing in warring appearance for as much more to finish with.

The Washington Light Infantry has perpetuated its memory with a beautiful monument and park. The inscriptions are elaborate 'o weary.

The South Carolina Military Institute has a beautiful park of good

Death of Mr. Schenck.

There was no improvement in the condition of Mr. Schenck today. He will of course be sicker and weaker from the operation for a few days, but that he is in a critical condition can not be denied, though there is still hope.

Later—This afternoon at 3:30 his mother and other relatives were summoned to his bedside, his condition being considered well nigh hopeless. He has been unconscious since 11 this morning, and the latest intelligence is that he is sinking rapidly.

It is most distressing, and the sympathy of the entire community goes out to his wife and relatives. Only ten days ago he appeared to be in his usual health.—Greensboro Record of 10th.

Mr. Schenck was operated upon for appendicitis on Monday. The Standard learns that Wednesday night Mr. Schenck passed away. He was a young lawyer of a bright and promising future.

Tribute to David Schenck, Jr.

In the Greensboro Record we find the following beautiful tribute, by Col. John N. Staples, a brother attorney, to David Schenck, Jr., who died Wednesday night:

"He stood looking into the break of the morning, full of hope, and inspiration born of a genius! behind him were the sepulchers of noble ancestry, around him were the shrines of domestic love, and before him the beckoning muses of great achievement and professional renown; but, alas! the shadows began to fall around him, the voices of evening called him and ere the meridian splendors of his day on earth began, he vanished into the night.

"Then, (let us bow before this last Decree of God, who leaeth all that have "Their being from naught, yes, all that 'er shall live, Unto their end and certain destiny. Though we may fail to comprehend his plan.

"From the bounds of time and space set free, who knows whither may roam his immortal spirit? From contention and strife, and the environments of an earthly life, he ventures out into the unknown Beyond—where let us hope, his morning began on this earth, may burst into the effulgence of an eternal day, whose brightness shall never fade, and whose sun shall never set."

A Change in the Mail Service.

Seeing and hearing the numerous complaints offered by the people of Concord on account of the mail sacks being torn to pieces at the depot these nights when thrown from No. 35, the Southern has changed its service in that respect. Instead of throwing it off at night now it is brought back on the early morning train. This change preserves our mail and gets to the people as early, and the morning train is never late as it is made up at Charlotte. This much has been gained by our "kicking."

Inspired Anticipation.

"Our Church Paper," published at New Market, Va., contains a very interesting article about the union of North Carolina and Lenoir colleges, the former at Mount Pleasant and the latter at Hickory. The article comes from Elizabeth College, Charlotte, N. C., under date of May 1, 1899, before syndet met. Can the contributor tell how to mix oil and water and make 'em stay mixed? X X.

Our Mills Represented.

At the meeting of the Southern Cotton Spinners' Association in Charlotte our mills of the town and county were represented. Among the number were Superintendent Coble, of the Odell mills; Superintendent Cole, of the Cabarrus mill, and Superintendent James, of the Kindley mill at Mt. Pleasant.

The case wherein Ed. Post, of this place, was to be tried for assaulting a man named Bastian in Saw, in Rowan county, some months ago, has been continued until next court. Quite a number of persons are to be tried for the general fight they had. Bastian, who came near dying from the blow dealt on his head, has recovered.

Written a Love Story.

Miss Cora Smoot, a sister of Dr. Smoot and Mr. M. L. Smoot, of Concord, and a student of Greensboro Female college, has written a love story, christened "Thotis." The Salisbury Sun, reading it in the College Message, says it is well written and entertaining.

Can Compell Vaccination.

There seemed to be some doubt about the constitutionality of an ordinance concerning vaccination. The following from today's Raleigh News and Observer sets the matter at rest:

Some sixty or seventy people in Raleigh, principally negroes and the more ignorant class of white people, have refused to be vaccinated.

They will at once be compelled to comply with the law. They would already have been dealt with, but for the fact that Mayor Powell has been waiting to get the opinion of eminent lawyers as to the validity of the ordinance. They were unanimous in the opinion that the law is constitutional and will stand the test of the courts.

As soon as these opinions were obtained Mayor Powell Tuesday afternoon had the following notices served by a policeman on all persons refusing to be vaccinated: You are hereby notified to be vaccinated at once or to leave Raleigh township within twenty-four hours, upon penalty of fifty dollars fine or thirty days imprisonment as provided by ordinance.

They do not weaken by their action, but by giving tone to the stomach and bowels greatly invigorate the system. Regular size 25c. per box. Sold by P. B. Feltzer.

Proctor Nifong Dead.

We notice in the Western Sentinel, of Winston, an account of the death of Mr. C. Peeler Nifong. He died Saturday, the 6th, at the home of his parents near Midway, in Davidson county. He died from white swelling, which he has had since childhood. He was a nephew of Rev. W. A. Lutz and wife.

He was an excellent young man and one of character and force. He is known by numbers in this county at Enochville and Mt. Pleasant. He graduated in 1886 at North Carolina College.

If troubled with rheumatism, give Chamberlain's Pain-Balm a trial. It will not cost you a cent if it does no good. One application will relieve the pain. It also cures sprains and bruises in one-third the time required by any other treatment. Cuts, burns, frostbites, quinsy, pains in the side and chest, glandular and other swellings are quickly cured by applying it. Every bottle warranted. Price, 25 and 50 cts.—M. L. Marsh & Co.

Rev. J. J. Payeur Heard From.

The Wilmington Star of the 10th has this to say about a gentleman well known in Concord:

"Rev. J. J. Payeur, of Dixie, Mecklenburg county, yesterday announced to the authorities of the Brooklyn Baptist Church, his acceptance of the call to the pastorate of that congregation, which was extended to him some time ago.

Rev. Mr. Payeur has preached for the congregation of Brooklyn Church several times during the past few months and has impressed the people as a man of great gifts and an able pastor. He is a young man, an active worker, and the congregation of this church is to be congratulated upon securing his services.

Mr. Payeur, his wife and child are expected to remove to the city about May 21st."

Honeycutt-Stiefel Wedding.

Mr. David Honeycutt, a young man of our town, was married Wednesday night to Miss Mary Elizabeth Stiefel, daughter of Mr. John Stiefel of Cannonville. The affair took place at the bride's home, performed by Rev. T. W. Smith. The bride and groom left for Augusta on their bridal tour.

Adding to His Stock.

Miss' Rattle Wedding Gains the Prize.

A medal was offered at Mont Armonia Seminary for the best essay written by any member of the senior class. There were eleven competitors and Miss Hattie Weddington of this place gains the honor. Her subject was "Heroes and Hero Worship." This gives credit to Miss Weddington first, and to our county and town to think that such a large class, some from other States, were competing for this prize.

Becoming His Self.

His very many friends are delighted to see Mr. Smoot Day-vault looking so well; for the past month he has been making rapid jumps back towards what he used to be.

At the present rate it will not be many days before he will be himself again.

Her Health Restored

THE misery of sleeplessness can only be realized by those who have experienced it. Nervousness, sleeplessness, headaches, neuritis, and that miserable feeling of unrest, can surely be cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. So certain is Dr. Miles of this fact that all druggists are authorized to refund price paid for the first bottle tried, providing it does not benefit.

Ms. Henry Bruce, wife of the well known blacksmith at Grand Junction, Iowa, says: "I was troubled with sleeplessness, nervousness, headaches and irregular menstruation, suffering untold misery for years. I used various advertised remedies for female complaints besides being under the care of local physicians, without help. I noticed in Dr. Miles' advertisement the testimonial of a lady cured of ailments similar to mine, and I shall never cease to thank that lady. Her testimonial induced me to use Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and three bottles, which restored me to health. I cannot say enough for Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. It is a powerful medicine and is sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee, first bottle refunded if it does not benefit. Book on ailments of the heart and nerves free. Address: Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind."
