Growth of Finger Nails.

"Not many people know that the average growth of the finger nails is 1-32 of an inch per week or a little more than an inch and joint, without for a moment ina half per year," observed a physician recently to a Washington Star man. The growth, ton Star man. however, depends to a great extent upon the rate of nutrition, and during sickness and abstience from good norishing food it is retarded. Nails grow faster in summer than in winter, and the growth differs for different fingers, being usually most rapid in the middle tinger and slowest in the thumb. The average time taken for each finger nail to grow its full length is about four and a half months, and at this rate a man of seventy years of age would have renewed his nails 16 times.
