MR. PATTERSON'S STRANGE VIEWS.

with the Standard, $1.75.

W A Patterson, of Winston noting our little discussion of the 3rd and 4th commondments and the truly charming spirit in which it was received by the Charlotte Observer seems quite amused and then proceeds to display a good deal of error, not to say heterodoxy. We do not suppose we can say anything to convince him of his error, but it may be worth while to note a few Mr. Patterson thinks instructions given to Moses at the same time with reference to altars and sacrifices should command equal force with the Decalogue

Now surely the Jewish sacrifices were a type or sign fulfilled in the sacrifice of Christ and, therefore, done away with, while courage false swearing; but when the Savior did not abrogate the a lawyer is guilty of encourag-Commandments, but emphasized ing perjury in a witness he their teachings. We might ask him if he knows just the size of those tables of stone and the size of the letters or hieroglyphics, that he can say the decalogue would not have occupied both sides. All this gives us no more concern than the problem of where Cain got his wife. It is amazing, though, that Mr. Patterson should say that this problem is of more importance than the observance of the "garbled" Decalogue.
