THE FEAR'S PETTY-COAT.

Twenty-Nine-Year-Old Incident That is Interesting Still.

Fashion, always struggling to be original, is like a theatrical army, which, as it reappears upon the stage after its circuit, never fails to present something we recognize that destroys the designed illusion. Not even a Worth can create; he can only intimate. The complaint is to-day general that it is difficult to distinguish by their attire the sex of our young ladies; round hats, their jackets and their waistcoats, and now and then even their knickerbockers, may have been borrowed from their brothers. Their mothers and their aunt say: "Girls did not dress so in our day," which is quite true, but they did a hundred years ago. In the London Times of January, 1796, sarcastic reference is made to it. Earl Spencer had made a bet that he would cut on the tail of his coat and appear in public in it, and that this petty-coat would in a week be the fashion. He did so and won his bet. The Times comments:

When men in Petty-Coat appear
No wonder girls the breeches wear;
But happier far would be the case,
Were each to keep their proper place—
The fair ones wear the female dress,
And men adorn their persons less;
For such the fashion of the day,
They make it difficult to say
Whether the pretty things we meet
Parading through their favorite street,
A male or female we may call,
Their shapes are so equivocal.—London Graphic.

Not Drowned, But Very Near It.

It was rumored on the streets Friday afternoon that a young white boy was drowned at Morris' pond, but it seems there is some mistake about the affair. The boy was crossing the creek on a raft, when the log upon which he was walking floated down the stream. He slipped off into the water and the trash from the raft passed over him, holding him under the water. He was rescued. When taken out it was some time before consciousness was restored, but little Sammie Beaver yet lives to tell the tale.

A Splendid Idea.

The Greensboro Record says: "In order to keep an account of the number of new buildings which will be put up this year an ordinance was passed some time ago requiring a permit before a building is started. A violation of the ordinance is a fine of $1.00.

"The object is a good one and it is hoped all who build will remember to call on the clerk and get a permit. The cost is nothing whatever and the publication of the number of buildings at the end of the year will benefit all."

[This would be a good thing for Concord. It would cost nothing, and yet put us in a position to know accurately the growth of the town.]

To the Citizens of Concord.

We will visit your premises on our sanitary duties, and all such not found in good sanitary condition, will be reported to the mayor and warrants issued for your arrest. Take warning and save cost.

IT IS A-COMING.

The Cabarrus Cotton Mills to Run Both Day and Night—New Houses to Be Built at Once.

A Standard reporter was reliably informed this (Saturday) afternoon that the Cabarrus Cotton Mills will begin running at night as soon as houses can be furnished for the operatives.

Rev. W A Sides, a contractor at Cannonville, will begin at once the erection of four houses to be complete within thirty days. They will be built on Cabarrus Hill, this side of the mill.

Contracts will be let next week for the building of more houses. The Cabarrus is progressive.

Here's a Good One.

A reporter was told this morning of a right funny occurrence. Friday a certain man called at a grocery store and ordered a spring chicken sent up. The chicken was sent. When the "creep" was delivered to the lady of the house she put it into a bird cage. When the husband arrived at home he asked if a chicken had been sent up. His wife then very enthusiastically exclaimed, "No, Will, but we have one of the cutest little birds you ever saw!"

In a Bad Fix.

Mr. C E Alexander, of Sims & Alexander, Friday locked his safe, containing all his books, cash, etc. and a box of watches from Mr. James Willeford's work bench, and can't get them out. He has not forgotten the combination, however. The lock won't work. Several experts have tried to open it, but without success.

Compromise.

Mr. Winterbottom—Emily, the doctor says all we need for these colds of ours is whiskey and quinine.

Mrs. Winterbottom—Cyrus, if you think you're going to get any whiskey down my throat you are much mistaken!

Mr. Winterbottom—And I haven't a particle of faith in quinine. So I bought them in separate packages. Here's your quinine.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.

May Weather in 1822.

The Norfolk Pilot scratches up the following bit of interesting record for the North Carolina Evening post of May 15th, 1895:

"The Season—Some of our oldest inhabitants do not recollect of a season so backward as this has been. It is now the middle of May, and the cold is so severe that it is necessary to keep up the fires in our parlor, and vegetation has received a very serious check by the prevalence of north wind. It is stated in the Salem Observer that on Friday last the air at that place was filled with falling snowflakes, and that the sky exhibited the wildness and sternness of March weather. We had letter recently from New Orleans which state that similar unseasonable weather was prevailing there in the middle of April.
