KORNER WRITES.

"Over the hills and far away, I'll go hunting Thanksgiving Day."

Doubtless the sportsman and lover anticipate striking the same trail on Thursday next, since a holiday has been promised the toiling masses but it is not at all likely that their game will correspond. The man with the gun and dog "Will shoot the duck, Cut the buck, And furnish quail on toast," but the man with all equipments he can possibly secure, will devote his time to locating and chasing dears, as in a ground-hog case, until about the time he thinks dinner is ready, "When he'll sit and chat, About this and that Till he gets a turkey roast."

To be plain, duty should be considered before pleasure in all things, and it behooves us, as a common, submissive people, to meet en masse at an appointed hour in one or more of the public places of worship and render thanks and show appreciation unto Him who has supplied our almost every want so bountifully and graciously and who has preserved us through another year. We all have something to be thankful for, and let us, one and all—the babies too—remember the poor and distressed, the sick, the orphans and widows. Ye old miser and moss-back, ye that are hostile with thy fellowman, thou who art mean and miserable, high and lofty and not on good terms with your neighbor, humble yourself just once, make reparation for past misdeeds and donate something, if only a shilling to a good, benevolent cause and the Good Man will see that you lose nothing by it. Fathers and mothers should bear in mind that perhaps misfortune might overtake a child or descendant of their own that would some day be dependent upon an asylum for its protection and education, therefore remember those we now have to care for and give in proper training for a course in life. Instead of purchasing a gun and shells for one day's pleasure and tiresome sport, or a bag of fruit, box of candy, horse and buggy or block of chewing gum, deny yourself and give up on this event. We are taught that "God loveth a cheerful giver" and we have no sufficient proof to doubt it, therefore when we give, give cheerfully, and think at the same time that we should "do unto others as we would have them do unto us."

When I was a sparking around afore the Misses and I were wed, a certain chronic of the old man got it into my head to step across, which didn't take much persuasion, but lots of courage. It was a silly notion of mine up to that time that I would be the last one that would ever consent to do anything of the kind, as matrimony and parental care was not a hobby with me. Well, it was fixed, however, and forever. Ohum hung around around like a wandering exile for a year or two after my debut into this other world, when nothing would please him better than to make himself four halves or two ones. This delighted me. I was too poor to return the compliment paid to me, but knowing that he was fond of good reading and my wife having previously given me the book that I might live and benefit by its perusal, after learning it by heart, I presented him with "Paradise Lost." He has not spoken to me in two years.

A BEAUTIFUL MARRIAGE.

It Took Place Today at High Noon in the Presbyterian Church—The Scene One of Beauty and Interest—Miss Morehead is Wedded to Mr. Patterson.

Thursday's Durham Sun: A prettier marriage never took place in Durham than the one which occurred today at high noon, at the Presbyterian church, when Miss Margaret Morehead, daughter of Mrs. Eugene Morehead, became the bride of Mr. Rufus Lenoir Patterson.

The handsome interior of the Presbyterian church presented an enchanting scene. The building was darkened and the soft, mellow electric lights shed a radiance of beauty upon the symmetrical arranged decorations. The altar was arranged in a Japanese garden style, with palms and ferns, and lovely white and yellow chrysanthemums stood in matchless rows around the edge of the platform, with bright faces as if smiling their cordial greetings and sanction to the vows of the young couple. Next to the grand old organ was a background of flowers and evergreens of equal beauty. On either side of this scene were grouped a unique arrangement of chrysanthemums, palms and charming florals, which presented a perfect picture of loveliness, no less so, however, than the bridal party as it stood in a semi-circle on either side of the popular young people who pledged their troth in the presence of a building crowded with their friends and well-wishers.

The ushers were J. F. Wily, J. L. Patterson, W. R. Kenan, Jr., J. M. Williamson, Jr., E. L. Holt, W. F. Shafer and F. A. Green.

Miss Annie Peay presided at the organ and at 12 o'clock, the familiar and inspiring notes of Mendelssohn's wedding march pealed forth and the bridal party filed in and took their places amid the brilliant scene.

The groom with his best man, A. H. Patterson, and Rev. W. A. Moore and L. B. Turnbull, entered from the left side of the church and took their stand in front of the flower-covered platform. J. M. Morehead, with the ushers advanced down either aisle and took their places in an outer circle. The young lady attendants entered from either door in the rear of the church and singly marched down to the happy spot where two hearts were to be united. They were attired in white and each one bore a beautiful bouquet of large chrysanthemums, alternating white and yellow. They were as follows.

Miss Lizzie Morehead, sister of the bride, first maid of honor; Miss Mary Saunders, of Richmond; Miss Gray Morehead, of Leaksville; Miss Hattie Howard, of Tarboro; Miss Annie Erwin, of Morganton, and Misses Matilda Heartt, Lida Carr, Mabel Tomlinson and Annie Watts, of Durham.

The bride entered from the left hand door, leaning upon the arm of J. Turner Morehead, who proceeded to the altar, where she was met by the groom. It formed a lovely picture. The bride was beautifully attired in white, with the flowing veil and carried a handsome bouquet of white flowers.

Rev. Dr. W. A. Moore, of Hampden-Sidney College, in a most impressive manner, solemnized the marriage vows. He was assisted by Rev. L. B. Turnbull.

The newly married, with their attendants repaired to the delightful and hospitable home of the bride's mother where a splendid reception was tendered their hosts of friends from 1 to 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The bride and groom are two of the most popular young people in Durham, and we may say the State, and the interest manifested in their happiness and joy is very great. Good wishes abound on every side, and the Sun joins their multitude of friends in expressing for them length of years, filled with all blessings and happiness.

Six Weeks Work.

Mayor Morrison has the street force hard at it grading and otherwise beautifying Mill street. The work is calculated to take at least six weeks time to properly put it in trim.

Will Finish Next Week.

Mr. J. M. Russell, foreman of the wood work at the new factory at Cannonville, told a reporter this morning that by December 1 the mill would stand complete, so far as wood and brick work was concerned. When through here, Mr. Russell will return to Gaffney, S. C., where he will superintend the erection of a city hall being built by Capt. A. H. Propst.

The Whiskey Sellers.

The Salisbury World reports the following cases as disposed of in the Superior courts:

John Bostian, retailing without license, plead guilty; sentenced to six months in county jail.

David Wensel, retailing, plead guilty; six months in jail.

Augustus House, retailing, judgment suspended provided he retail no more.

Jesse Knox, larceny, guilty; 12 months on chain gang.
