LOWE & DICK,

BRYAN'S DAY.

THE DEMOCRATIC PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE HERE.

He Addressed 2,500 People at the Railroad Station From the Platform Erected for Him—A Word on Free Silver and a Word to the Laboring Man.

Over two thousand people gathered in this city to hear that peerless advocate of the people, William Jennings Bryan, the Democratic nominee for President.

The hour was late, but the people cheerfully waited, unmindful of Old Sol's scorching rays, their favorite herald of prosperity, and when his special train arrived they yelled until they could sympathize with him in his hoarseness.

Amid the waving of hats, hankchiefs, umbrellas and a general hurrah, he was escorted to the stand and introduced by Chairman A B Young. For a few moments pandemonium reigned supreme and considerable persuasion was necessary to quiet the people.

On beginning his remarks Mr. Bryan was so hoarse that he was heard with difficulty, but as he proceeded his wonderfully rich, strong voice penetrated to the very outskirts of the crowd, raising the enthusiasm of his hearers to at least 100 degrees in the shade.

Mr. Bryan said:

"Gentlemen and ladies, fellow citizens: I saw some of Concord's people in Charlotte, and it gives me great pleasure to see so many of them here now. As I have but a few moments I see no better way of using them than giving you a few of the questions asked the advocates of free coinage and their answers. Very few converts are made by public speaking, but when friend talks with friend and neighbor runs against neighbor, they compare arguments and many votes are changed.

I wish to tell you some things that you may use in this way:

The advocates of the gold standard appeal to that inherent sense of honesty planted in the breast of every man by speaking of silver as depreciated currency, as a fifty-cent dollar. Let us see if this is true. I know of no better way of illustrating this than by the price of butter. In my native town out in Nebraska we buy our butter from a firm. This man goes out and engages all the butter he can, to be furnished the year round at the same price—25 cents, I believe, is the price we pay for it. Now in the Spring, he finds that he has more butter than is needed to supply these customers and so what does he do? He simply places his butter in the market and sells it at a reduced price—at about 15 cents per pound. Now it is the same way with silver. When the mints were open to silver it was worth $1.00 per ounce, but when the mints were closed to silver the supply exceeded the demand and it naturally sank, not in purchasing value, but as bullion measured by the gold standard.

The fallacy of their argument lies in their measuring silver bullion, which is excluded from the mints by gold to which the mints have never been closed.

Then they tell you that our mints will be flooded with foreign silver. We will examine this. Foreign countries need all the silver they can obtain to maintain their own commerce. France, England, Japan, Mexico—all the nations of the world demand their share of the money metals. Today France has more silver, per capita, in circulation than we have, and that at a less ratio—15 to 1. And yet silver bullion is higher there than in our own country. Surely no one can afford to export silver to this country when it is worth more in that country than in this.

Then they tell you that all the marketable silver will be thrown on the market. That all the spoons and silver plate will be thrown into the crucible and converted into bullion. Would anyone do this unless the value of the bullion exceeded that of the plate? Of course this cannot be.

They come to the wage-earner with the argument that free silver, by increasing the currency, will decrease the value of your wages without increasing them. The gold standard has starved the consumers of your labor. Starve the consumer and the factory must stop.

This is a manufacturing town. I wish to speak a word to these operatives. You believe free coinage to be to your interest. Your ballot is your own. Your employee did not give you your vote—do not let him take it from you. (Great applause.)

I want just one more word. Your vote is your own. It is your privilege to use it as you see best and to your best interest. Thanks for your kind attention." And again the crowd went wild. As he stepped off the platform there was a tremendous rush for the train. As he ascended the rear platform of the rear car men clatched at his hand—hundreds seeking to give him a farewell shake and the word of "good luck to you." Amid a wild huzza the hero departed. The attraction was gone—in five minutes the crowd had dispersed.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Diamonddale, Mich.: we are permitted to make this extract: I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Trial bottles free at Fetzner's Drug Store. Regular size 50c and $1.00.

In a Pitiful Condition.

Mrs. Calvin Mingus, whose husband is now in the county home of Cabarrus, is in a pitiful condition at her home on bank street. She is in a dying condition with consumption and has neither money nor food in her house. She has several little children and a subscription is being raised today for her relief.—Salisbury World.
