NOT McKINLEYISM.

Business is putting on new life along the manufacturing lines. In future campaigns this will be recited as history, and McKinley high-tariffism given the credit for it. Considerate people, though, will remember that the free silver growth was most phenomenal, and it seemed probable that Mr. Bryan would be elected, which meant a financial experiment of such doubtfulness in its immediate results that capital was shy.

Gold was hoarded even by some champions of free coinage with the hope of speculation. Now gold hoardings are destined to be profitless, and suspended vigor in manufacturing gave opportunity for consumption to create room for their productions, and too, the very law of reaction, all these conspire to make business assume new vigor. We are moving under the Wilson tariff bill and are likely to do so for some time. There will probably be a measure of revenue production from some source to take the place of the income tax fund, but there is nothing characteristic of McKinley financing to give impetus to business. It is not so much that McKinley was elected as that Bryan was not, and whether or not the impetus is anything more than temporary and spasmodic depends on the ability of the party in power to grapple successfully with the situation.

BUTLER STILL AT IT.

These are the days of addresses to the public by party chairman and Mr. Butler is out too with one as fine type of Populism as we could get from any source. It has been painful to us through the campaign that in our efforts to see all the better class of our citizens united under one organic name and set of principles, that old life time friends whose hearts must testify to the fidelity and trustworthiness of their former political associates would as a plea for their uniting with our common enemy Republicanism, plead that Democrats can't be trusted. No no, they can have no confidence in Democrats. We were amazed and wondered how bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh could talk right in our faces as if we were liars and hypocrites, fools and knaves.

But this stream of muddy waters is traceable to its fountain head and spoils much in Mr. Butler's address that might have merited encomium. Mr. Butler sees in President Cleveland's conspicuous generosity toward the South in recognizing her merits for Cabinet and other officials only a narrow scheming trick to defeat silver legislation. What palpable ingratitude and studied efforts to distort truth. The cabinets and all the essential appointments were made before the special uprising of the free silver sentiment and of course Mr. Butler knows this as well as any one, and all through the campaign the effort was made to break the force of every gold standard Democrat by showing that he had been a free silver advocate till quite recently, they even said it of Cleveland himself. Mr. Butler considers this recognition of the South in the national councils as a deeply laid scheme even of Republicanism in '92 to elect Cleveland to capture the South to the crushing of silver. As it does not bear out his suspicions in matter of fact, it only reveals the perversity of Mr. Butler's resources and his ability to mislead his followers into such vagaries and shows the danger to which his influences may lead them.

DEMOCRAT A GOOD NAME.

Mr. Butler and a few Populists of Concord (great minds run in the same channel) say that the late defeat is attributable to the name Democrat that was conspicuously connected with the ticket. Well, there are a good many people who do not know a good thing when they see it. As for us the name that is connected with many of the best years in the history of our State and nation and still stands for equality before the law, tariff for revenue only, State's rights as far as practicable and consistent with a strong national government, the use of both gold and silver as money metals, opposition to trusts and monopolies, a reckless and demoralizing pension system and a jealous, suspicious hatred toward neighbors, both individual and national, we say the name that represents past glory, and present virtue is good enough for us. We love the name Democrat as we love the roof that shelters us from the storm, as the yard in which we played when a boy and as we love the rays of sunshine that lights our pathway.

If there is a daub on the skirts of Democracy it is not infidelity to principles half so much as compromising overtures in this campaign to Mr. Butler and his followers who are forever charging us with bad faith and then fusing with Republicans or anything to beat the Democrats.

Mt. Airy has a three legged rooster. He was evidently hatched to crow for the Democratic, Populist and silver party triumph but missed his calling.

Elder Cannon, a Mormon, in Utah ran for the State Senate leaning to the gold standard side. One of his wives, Mrs. Agnes Cannon, espoused the silver cause, made a vigorous campaign and beat "her old man" and now there's a streak of trouble in the family.

The Charlotte Observer says that Walter R Henry is slated for the position of judge of the Criminal court to succeed Judge Meares; that the negro lawyer, John S Leary will be clerk in place of W W Phifer, Esq., of Charlotte; W D Cowles may succeed Capt. Ardrey as assayer of the mint; and the postoffice in Charlotte will go to Ed. McDonald, Shelton or Gordon. The Republicans are openly boasting that they will give Charlotte a new charter, take in more territory, and give the city a Republican Mayor and negro policemen.

The next thing on now is the slating of a cabinet for Mr. McKinley. The name of Mr. Cornelius N Bliss, of New York, for the treasury is a foregone conclusion with those who can see no other possible candidate because their eyes are full of Bliss.

Beautiful eyes grow dull and dim
As the swift years steal away.
Beautiful, willowy forms so slim
Lose fairness with every day.
But she still is queen and hath charms to spare
Who wears youth's coronal - beautiful hair.

Preserve Your Hair

and you preserve your youth. "A woman is as old as she looks," says the world. No woman looks as old as she is if her hair has preserved its normal beauty. You can keep hair from falling out, restoring its normal color, or restore the normal color to gray or faded hair, by the use of
