CONCORD, NOV. 24 1893.

We are glad to see so able and so sagacious a mind as that pushing the Charlotte Observer coming to our relief in the opinion that Major Gutarie was not playing the part of the political trickster in the course he pursued at the closing of the late campaign. When the knowing ones pop up their heads and tell us how we are deceived in everybody, we wonder if there are none true. We are humiliated also by our lack of sagacity. But when our judgement is strengthened by the concurrence of those with more sagacity and less suspicious incredulity than the wise acres that would place themselves on equal footing with distinguished characters by pulling those characters down on a level with themselves, we are glad to err on the side of credulity sometimes, rather than invite others to suspect us by teaching them that no one is sincere. No confidence seems to be half the stock in trade with many of our modern politicians and the vilest construction possible to be put upon the actions of others seems a sufficient palliative for a conscience self-condemned.

In the days when the good old puritans were jealous for the abnegation of self and the rigid-enforcement of all the outward observance of moral and spiritual law there was intolerance of all instrumental music in the church services. The innovation came against much pressure and irreconcilable opposition. In one instance the pastor was overruled in his opposition to a violin as an accompaniment to the choir. At the close of his discourse he said: "We will now sing and fiddle the 45th Psalm." What would be his righteous indignation if he could attend a service now in some of our musical congregations and hear all the instruments that seem to us to add so much to our spiritual uplifting?

It is proposed in Kansas, this winter, at the assembling of the legislature to make Mexican silver dollars a legal tender. We have no doubt the same proposition is likely to come before the North Carolina legislature. We heard it hinted in the campaign. Why should it not be done? What great objection is there to it? It will place more money in the hands of the people, and its circulation will be confined to the State thereby keeping it at home. The great cry is more money, and this will certainly tend in that direction.—Durham Sun.

[If such should find any particular lodgement we would think it would be bad on the free silver cause.]

Complaint is frequently made that country editors are not good business men. This certainly cannot be said of an eastern editor who offered a prize of $50 for the best written proposal of marriage by a lady. He selected one written by a rich widow, and answered with a letter of acceptance. When the lady refused to marry him he sued her for breach of promise. That man has missed his calling. He should have been a lawyer.—Press and Printer.

Some newspaper man is credited with the saying that Gov. Russell's staff will be made up of men wearing girdles of 44 inches each. Is the administration to be noted for girth rather than brains?

Speaking of the various Presidents after Washington the New York Mail and Express in a recent article gives a lot of interesting information: "John Adams and his son, John Quincy Adams, were Harvard men. Jefferson and Monroe were graduates of William and Mary, while Madison hailed from Princeton; Jackson had little education of any sort, and Van Buren, his successor, only a good academic education. William Henry Harrison graduated at Hampden-Sidney College. Tyler at William and Mary, and Polk at the University of North Carolina. Taylor had only the merest rudiments of an education, and Fillmore, his successor, had an academic education only. Franklin Pierce was a graduate of Bowdoin, and Buchanan of Dickinson. Lincoln and Johnson were both self educated, neither having had even a high school education. Grant was a West Pointer; Hays an alumnus of Kenyon, Garfield of Williams and Arthur of Union. From Washington to McKinley, therefore, including Washington and Grant, fifteen of the twenty-five may be called college-bred men. While President Cleveland is not a college man, Mrs. Cleveland is a college woman, being a graduate of Wells College, at Aurora, in this State, class of '84. His right-hand man in the cabinet, Dan Lamont, secretary of war, is a graduate of Union, as is also Secretary Morton, of the Department of Agriculture. Olney is a Harvard man, Carlisle and Herbert are not college men. Postmaster General Wilson is not only a college-bred man, but has been President of West Virginia University."

Loose clothes and downy cushions bring only a negative sort of comfort to the woman who is suffering with some disease or derangement of the organs distinctly feminine. Some clothes and some positions make the pain and the discomfort seem less. Perhaps the nerves are most affected and this in turn disturbs the digestion. Nothing will ever completely relieve but a radical cure. The start of so-called "female complaints" may be a very slight thing indeed. It may be that in the beginning some small hygienic measures would stop the trouble. Certainly at this time, a little bit of the right medicine would stop it. When the trouble becomes worse, it is harder to cure, but still it can be cured. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will positively cure any trouble of this character. It may be absolutely relied upon. It affords lasting relief to a woman whose natural modesty has kept her from consulting a physician.

The difference between printing and publishing was aptly defined by a young lady who said to her lover: "You may print a kiss on my cheek but you must not publish it." With that he locked the fair form in his arms and went to press.

Did You Ever See—

- A lazy man who had time?
- A young man who didn't know?
- An old man who didn't remember?
- A politician who wouldn't promise?
- A pretty girl who didn't look saucy?
- A town go forward rapidly when part of its people pull against the other part?
- Any kind of weather over which somebody did not grumble?
- A man who did not know exactly just how every other business ought to be run except his own?
- A mother who felt that her boy was to blame for anything?
- A candidate who did not think he was the man until after the election?—Davie Times.

Do You Use It?

It's the best thing for the hair under all circumstances. Just as no man by taking thought can add an inch to his stature, so no preparation can make hair. The utmost that can be done is to promote conditions favorable to growth. This is done by Ayer's Hair Vigor. It removes dandruff, cleanses the scalp, nourishes the soil in which the hair grows, and, just as a desert will blossom under rain, so bald heads grow hair, when the roots are nourished. But the roots must be there. If you wish your hair to retain its normal color, or if you wish to restore the lost tint of gray or faded hair use

Ayer's Hair Vigor.
